Richman Ship Is Marooned Near Canada After Crash

Singer Forced Down With Merrill by Lack of Fuel in Newfoundland.

Rickenbacker Goes To Rescue of Pair

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—Harry Richman and Dick Merrill tonight reported the completion of their round-trip transatlantic flight in a forced landing near Musgrave Harbor, Newfoundland.

A telegram to Eddie Rickenbacker, airline official, signed by the fliers, said they were marooned and in need of supplies. An earlier unsigned message to Rickenbacker, read:

"Made forced landing account of gas stop damaged propeller."

The second message read:

"Marooned Musgrave Harbor 150 miles from Harbor Grace. Need mechanic and battery. Small ship can land on beach where we are. Signed, Richman and Merrill."

Tonight Rickenbacker flew north to the rescue, taking with him George W. ("Pete") Branson, chief pilot; Joseph J. Kelly, co-pilot; Earl Powell, Richman's private mechanic and pilot, and John Dobbin McPhail and Jewell Nurenhouse, mechanics. They carried 800 extra gallons of gasoline, a spare battery and oil.

They planned to land at Hartford, Conn., to pick up a spare propellor for the Richman plane and then fly to Boston for a few hours' rest before taking off early tomorrow for Sidney, Nova Scotia.

First Round-Trip on Record.

The flight was the first round-trip one over the Atlantic ever achieved by man, although it did not reach its objective—Floyd Bennett Field, New York.

The Musgrave Harbor landing was reported by the Canadian press as occurring at 1:20 p. m. (E. S. T.), 15 hours and 17 minutes after the plane had taken off from Southport, England.

Merrill, vacationing airlines pilot, and Richman, radio and screen entertainer, started their flight from England at 10:03 p. m. (Eastern standard time) last night with New York as their goal.

The last radio report received here prior to the forced landing said Richman's plane, the Lady Peace, had been sighted off Cape Race, Newfoundland, at 12:05 (E. S. T.).

Battled Head Winds.

All the way across the North Atlantic Merrill and Richman had bucked strong head winds.

Radio stations along the coast reported hearing the radio-telephone of the plane during the morning, but said poor transmission conditions garbled attempts at conversation.

At 3:07 a. m. (E. S. T.), the fliers radioed they were 1,181 miles west of Southport Beach, or about one-third of the 3,350-mile course they were following.

Clyde Line Docks Burn in $150,000 Fire at Charleston

By the United Press.

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 14.—Damage estimated tonight ranged from $150,000 to $250,000 as all Charleston land and harbor fire fighting apparatus battled a raging waterfront blaze which destroyed the Clyde-Mallory freight terminal here.

At 7:30 p. m., four hours after it broke out late today, the fire still was roaring, firemen, however, said it would be under control shortly. The city was covered by a smoke pall and the conflagration threatened to spread to other waterfront structures.

Major source of danger appeared to be two huge storage tanks, 200 yards west of the blazing wharf, containing 20,000 gallons of gasoline and fuel oil. Firemen were surrounding the tanks with a wall of water.

Origin of the fire had not been determined. The Clyde-Mallory freight terminal was in ruins and an adjoining passenger terminal suffered damage. The Clyde-Mallory freighter, Henry R. Mallory, narrowly escaped damage in the fire. Moored at the freight terminal just after loading was completed, the vessel slipped its moorings and was towed out of danger by harbor tugs.

State Will Pay Tribute To Johnson Tomorrow

Litchfield, Minn., Sept. 14 (AP).—Gov. Hjalmar Petersen today proclaimed Wednesday as a day of mourning throughout the State for Magnus Johnson, former United States Senator, who died Sunday.

Irving Thalberg, Film Official, Dies Unexpectedly in California

By the Associated Press.

Santa Monica, Calif., Sept. 14.—Irving Thalberg, the 37-year-old producer whom the film world held up as a business genius and a model husband, died unexpectedly today at the beach home he shared with his actress-wife, Norma Shearer.

Miss Shearer, who played the feminine title role in Thalberg's production of "Romeo and Juliet," was at his bedside at the end.

Dr. Phillip Newmark said Thalberg died of lobar pneumonia which developed from a slight cold contracted several days ago. His illness became critical shortly before dawn and he died at 10:26 a. m. (1:26 p. m. Eastern standard time.)

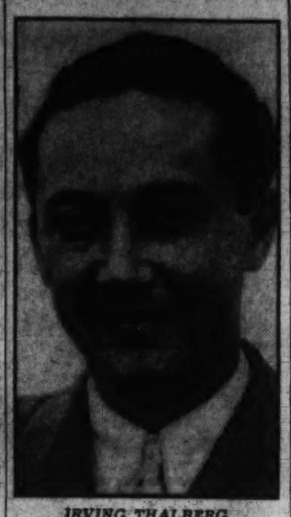
The producer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Thalberg; Miss Shearer's mother, Mrs. Edith Shearer, and Mrs. Sylvia Thalberg Weingarten, Thalberg's sister, were gathered in the home.

Miss Shearer was reported prostrated.

First intimation that the producer of such film successes as "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "Ben Hur," was in a serious condition came yesterday when Dr. F. Groedel, New York luung specialist, came here by airplane.

Dr. Newmark said Thalberg lapsed into a coma early today. He rallied slightly but went into an almost immediate decline that ended in his death.

This morning his two children,



IRVING THALBERG.

Irving, jr., 6, and Katharine, 1, were taken to the bedside but Thalberg did not recognize them.

Thalberg's was a spectacular career in Hollywood.

He came into the industry as private secretary to Carl Laemmle, sr., former head of Universal Studios. After two years at that post, he went directly to the position of general

Gabrilowitsch, Famous Pianist, Dies in Detroit

Husband of Mark Twain's Daughter Conducted Symphony.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 14.—The Detroit Symphony Orchestra which Ossip Gabrilowitsch had directed since 1918, will play Wednesday at the funeral for the internationally known pianist and conductor, who died today at his home.

A service in Orchestra Hall here was being planned and his widow, Clara, whose father was Samuel G. Clemens (Mark Twain), said burial will be at Elmira, N. Y., in the Clemens family plot where the author and his wife are buried.

Gabrilowitsch, who was 56, was unable to conduct his orchestra for more than a year, having had two operations for a stomach disorder since collapsing in the spring of 1935 after a piano recital in New York.

Mrs. Gabrilowitsch, whom he married in 1909, and their only child, Nina, survive.

Born in Russia.

One of the best known and highly esteemed musicians of his generation, Ossip Salomonovitch Gabrilowitsch was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, on February 7, 1878. A talented child, he entered the conservatory of his native city before he had reached his teens and studied piano with Anton Rubinstein, and composition with Navratil, Lyadoff and Glazunoff. At the age of 16 he won the coveted Rubinstein prize.

After a further period of piano study with Leschetizki in Vienna, he made his debut as a concert pianist in Berlin in 1896. His youth and his romantic style of playing won him an immediate success and for several years he toured Germany, France, England, Russia and Holland. In 1900 he made his first visit to the United States, where his triumph was as pronounced as it had been abroad.

Successive tours of this country were made in 1901, 1906, 1909, 1914, 1915 and 1916. In 1909 he married Clara Clemens, daughter of Mark Twain, who was a musician in her own right and had prepared herself for a career as a pianist by studying with Leschetizki and Mozkovski. It was as a singer, however, that she made her debut in Florence in 1904. After her marriage, she toured ex-

News of Parley On Insurance Hailed by Knox

'It's Time for Government to Be Worried,' He Tells Montana Audience.

By Sidney Olson.

On the heels of a White House announcement that heads of life insurance companies today would confer with President Roosevelt, Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, last night asserted that "it is high time that the Government should be worrying about the condition of life insurance policies."

Col. Knox, speaking at Helena, Mont., according to the Associated Press, repeated the contention he made on September 5 at Allentown, Pa., that "under the present policies of this Administration no life insurance policy is secure, no savings account is safe." He added that "no intelligent person could possibly construe" this statement as "referring to the solvency of any bank, insurance company or other private enterprise."

"It could only refer to the blind squandering and credit adulteration by the Government," he asserted, and went on to add that insurance companies and savings banks are as "safe as the rock of Gibraltar—it is the Administration of the American Government that is unsound."

The White House clothed with mystery the purpose of the President's meeting with insurance companies. The purpose of the meeting, the names of those to attend it and its significance alike were held secret. To all questions, Stephen T. Early, assistant Presidential secretary, answered noncommittally.

Speculation however, connected today's meeting and the Knox speech at Allentown, Pa., which Pennsylvania officials had taken cognizance with a threat to proceed against the Republican candidate for attributing instability to the banks of that State.

Late in the day Early told newsmen that the President first had written the insurance executives August 24—12 days before the Knox speech. The United Press from New York, however, reported that an invitation to the conference was received "some time last week" by Leroy Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. A canvass of insurance companies in Hartford, Conn., insurance capital, failed to reveal, the United Press stated, any executive who had an

Pope Urges World Unity Against Reds

Refugees From Strife in Spain Hear Attack on Communism.

Broadcast Appeals to All Nations to Stop 'Present Chaos.'

The Situation Abroad.

Pope Pius summoned the world to stand firm against communism's "threatening program of hate, subversion and destruction."

Adolf Hitler told the Nazi "congress of honor" that the Soviet Union is moving troops ever closer to the Reich. "We will combat Moscow if the Soviets attempt to bring the Spanish disaster to Germany," he warned.

The State Department announced Secretary Hull had authorized temporary abandonment of the American consulate at Bilboa, Spain, so the consul and his staff might flee to safety in France.

Government defenders of Bilbao had advised foreigners to leave the city and warned commanders of foreign warships that the harbor would be mined in preparation for an expected rebel attack.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Sept. 14.—Age-weary Pope Pius summoned the world today to stand firm against the threatening "program of hate, subversion and destruction"—communism.

Speaking to 500 refugees from Spain's civil war and to far corners of the earth by his own radio, the 79-year-old holy father appealed for a crusade of prayer against forces that menace "the very foundations of all order, all culture and all civilization."

Sadly, grieving that war in Spain has hurled brother against brother, he beseeched all nations "to oppose these great evils" to prevent chaos "if, indeed, it is not already too late."

The pontiff, in white cassock, mantle and red slippers, spoke from the throne at his summer residence here. His voice, low pitched at first, gradually became strong and pulsated with feeling.

About him were the refugees, among them many priests garbed in clerical robes for the first time since they fled Spain in civilian clothes.

Special Praise.

To them the Holy Father addressed special praise. They were, he said, like the first apostles, found worthy to suffer.

"You have been robbed and despoiled of all things. You have been hunted and sought unto death in the cities, villages and dwellings of men and in the solitude of mountain tops. . . .

"You have come to tell us of your joy in having been found worthy, like the first apostles, to suffer for the name of Jesus."

But for the "persecutors" in Spain, Pope Pius told his audience, "we cannot and could not for one moment doubt as to what is left for us to do—

"To love them and love them with a special love born of mercy and compassion, to love them and since we can do nothing else, to pray for them.

"To pray that a serene vision of truth will illuminate their minds and will reopen their hearts to desire and fraternal quest for real common good."

The Pope did not once use the word "communism," but Vatican sources said the major portion of his 40-minute address dealt with that subject.

He referred throughout to "forces of subversion."

"World Ensnared."

Incidents of the Spanish war, the Holy Father said, are "something more than a mere succession, however impressive, of devastation and disaster.

"They are likewise a school in which the most serious lessons are being taught to Europe and the whole world—to a world now at last wholly steeped in, ensnared and threatened by subversive propa-

Soviet Army Moves Closer, Hitler Warns

Nazis Will Fight if Reds Try to Repeat Crisis in Spain, He Says.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Nurnberg, Sept. 14.—The Soviet Union, "Germany's mortal enemy," is moving troops ever closer to the Reich, Adolf Hitler told the Nazi "congress of honor" tonight.

"We will combat Moscow," he said, "if the Soviets attempt to bring the Spanish disaster to Germany.

"May Bolshevism realize that there is a German army at the German frontier. Bolshevism, as we learned a few months ago, decided to rearm to propagate revolutions. The power of democracies to resist Bolshevism is too weak. They are the channels through which Bolshevism injects its poison. We admire Fascist Italy, which succeeded in solving this problem 11 years before us. We sympathize with those countries which adopt similar solutions, but we believe the same course is inevitable to all countries."

Reds "Mortal Enemy."

Hitler, delivering his final address before the congress, said "the national Socialist state will not menace the outside world so long as that world leaves Germany alone."

"But we are compelled to regard Bolshevists outside Germany as our mortal enemy, and we shall combat Moscow if the Soviets attempt to bring the Spanish disaster to Germany," he declared.

"What would have happened to Germany if Jewish-Bolshevist mismanagement had come to power here? We combated Bolshevism because from 50 to 70 per cent of the people would have starved under it.

"Ninety-eight per cent of the Bolshevist officials never worked and never earned their livelihood by honest labor."

Turning to the question of the army, Hitler said:

"The first and likewise the greatest political task of Nazi Germany was accomplished by introduction of two years of military service. That safeguarded Germany. German rearmament was essential to European pacification."

Foreshadowing higher taxes, Hitler told his listeners that more sacrifices would be needed.

"Individuals will not be asked what they want to donate, but will be compelled to give," he said.

His statement suggested the possibility of a defense campaign fund, in which private citizens would be compelled to give up part of their capital for support of the army as a national duty.

Hitler twice referred to his old theory that national socialism could not be exported and that Germany wanted to keep national socialism for herself.

Tonight he referred to German press reports of an allegedly current Russian famine.

"The Bolshevists ought not to accuse the weather," Der Fuehrer rasped. "Before the World War, Russia was one of the world's richest grain reservoirs. Now it is unable to feed its population. What a miserable system!

"Our regime excludes the exportation of political ideas. We recognize other people's rights to determine their political life—only on condition that others take the same attitude toward us. We are

Policemen Are Bid To Wedding Dance Of Former Protege

In the record book at the Tenth Precinct station — with murder, death and misery packed between its covers—an invitation to a wedding dance was entered yesterday.

It was the first time in the history of the station that any of the policemen could remember an entry like it. It reads:

"Rose Tassa, 456 Park road northwest, will be married Sunday, September 20, 1936, at 3 p. m. at Sacred Heart Church. At 8 p. m. there will be a reception at the above address, when drinks galore, eats aplenty will be served to all. Rose extends a cordial welcome to all officers of No. 10 to be present."

When that was written, the officers smiled and remembered the days of Rose's youth.

Rose told the tale herself yesterday:

"They used to call me Rose O'Grady, and I loved them all like brothers—those Irish cops calling me by that name and me of a Latin race. I used to go to the precinct and take all my troubles to them."

Rose said her mother died when she was just a girl.

"They all used to play with me," she said. "Once, I went in dressed as Mae West. They're still laughing about that."

Rose, pretty and 23, will marry Lee Lombardi, 3226 Park Heights avenue, Baltimore, Md.

"And I want all those cops to be there for the party," Rose said.

White Tops Brann by 9,000 On Vote in 362 Precincts

Triumph Hinges On Senate Result

Incumbent Awaits Last Returns Before Claim of Re-election.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Republican stalwarts yesterday apparently obtained in Maine the taste of victory for which they have hungered during six long years—since the political gods turned against them in the congressional elections of 1930. And they are expected to make the most of it.

But how deep they can drink of this cup of joy remained to be seen at an early hour this morning. It all depended on whether the Democratic Gov. Louis J. Brann would squeeze through with sufficient votes in the industrial towns of Maine to unseat the veteran Senator Wallace H. White, jr., from the latter's chair on Capitol Hill.

When slightly more than one-half of the Maine polling places had reported it appeared that the Republicans ahd recaptured the Governorship of the State and the two seats in the House of Representatives on which Democrats have been sitting. They retained the third House seat. These achievements surely marked the onward march of the Democratic forces in this rock-ribbed Republican State.

No Victory Claim.

But whether the Republicans again had been downed by the redoubtable and fearsome Brann remained in doubt. Even Senator White did not have the hardihood to claim the victory, preferring to see what the unreported ballot boxes contained. So did many other observers of this significant battle.

Throughout the counting of ballots Senator White had lagged behind his running mate for Governor, Lewis O. Barrows. But by midnight the Republican incumbent had a lead of approximately 8,000 votes over Gov. Brann—and this strength he held in the counting for another hour, bringing up his majorGity to better than 9,000 votes.

If Senator White maintains in the second half of the counting the lead he established in the first half, his election would be assured by a majority of between 15,000 and 20,000. But it was feared he would not hold that stride. For one thing, not a return had been received from Lewiston, the home town of both candidates. There Gov. Brann two years ago obtained 8,000 of the 23,503 majority he piled up on that occasion.

Should the Executive repeat that achievement in Lewiston he would have Senator White on the ropes and gasping for breath. From Maine around midnight came private advices to the effect that in any event the outcome of the Senatorial fight would be close—that it was certain Gov. Brann would not repeat his brilliant victory of two years ago, nor that Senator White would slide into office as he always has done in the past.

"Straw" for Democrats.

If Gov. Brann again establishes his invincibility, his victory will more nearly approximate his achievement of four years ago when ernor of the State since the Civil he became the first Democratic Gov. War by a margin of 3,300 votes. But from the Democratic viewpoint this would be sufficient—even though Gov. Brann has studiously dissociated himself from all New Deal policies, except that of spending money in Maine.

A Brann victory to Democratic Chairman James A. Farley would indeed be the saving of a Brann from the burning. He would taunt his Republican opoponents with it from morning and until evening every time they dared to suggest that "as goes Maine, so gose the Nation." But a Brann defeat, even though by the smallest margin, would leave Republican joy unadulterated and they would not hesitate to point out that Chairman Farley made a herculean effort to same Brann.

Landon Hailed By Big Crowds In 2 N. Y. Cities

Nominee Urges U. S. Halt Dictation to Industry; Backs Conservation.

By Felix Bruner.

A Staff Correspondent.

Aboard the Sunflower Special in New York State, Sept. 14.—Tremendous crowds that jammed the streets of Albany and Schenectady for blocks around the railroad stations greeted Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight as his campaign train swung from New England into New York. Landon managers expressed astonishment at the size of the reception given the candidate.

In both places plans for rear platform speeches were abandoned and the Governor left the train to speak from hastily-erected stands. In both cities he looked down from railroad elevations over the heads of people jamming streets and open spaces almost as far as he could see. At Schenectady a flying wedge of husky policemen fought a way through the jam around the train to get him to the speakers stand.

"To me," he told his Schenectady audience, "a party platform is a contract to be kept, not something to be thrown into the waste basket the day after election. The first thing the present Administration plowed under was the Democratic platform. They plowed under their promise to cut Government expense 25 per cent."

"We must restore the confidence of the people in the Government by demonstrating that industry will be free from the dictates and the management of the Government."

At Albany he brought into his speech the name of Theodore Roosevelt, who once sat in the State Capitol there. He recalled the late President's statement that only the people who take an interest in politics help to govern themselves. He said the crowds indicated the people were taking an interest.

Earlier in the day, Landon told New England audiences the Government must adopt a far more aggressive policy of soil and water conservation.

From Schenectady the train went on to Utica, Syracuse and Rochester. The last town was not on the original schedule, but a stop was made shortly before midnight at the request of local Republicans.

Through the industrial section of New England, Landon stressed his belief the Roosevelt Administration has failed to end the unemployment problem.

As the train swung westward into the region damaged by last spring's floods, the Republican Presidential candidate took up the soil and water conservation theme. He also stressed in all his talks the record

Barrows Has 3-to-2 Governorship Edge

G. O. P. Running Ahead in Three Contests for House Seats.

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Me., Sept. 15 (Tuesday). Traditionally Republican Maine appeared early today, on the basis of returns from more than half its precincts, to have given a clean sweep to Republican candidates in the State's disputed "barometer" election, with the outcome of the Senate race alone in doubt.

Louis J. Brann, only Democrat to be Governor in more than 40 years, was running far ahead of the other Democratic candidates, but was trailing his Republican opponent, Senator Wallace H. White, jr., by more than 9,000 votes.

White (Republican) 67,727; Brann (Democrat) 58,393.

The margin was so close Senator White said he would not claim victory until he heard from more districts.

Secretary of State Lewis O. Barrows, epublican gubernatorial candidate, held a lead that pointed toward likely victory over F. Harold Dubord, his Democratic opponent.

Margin Watched Closely.

Rival national campaign managers watched the final returns close to the margin of victory for the Republican ticket was expected to be the basis for conflicting claims whether the State had amassed a larger vote for the Republican ticket than usual.

Republican candidates for United States Representative held commanding leads in all three Congressional districts.

No returns from Lewiston, Democratic stronghold and home city of White and Brann, were included in the tabulation. Approximately 13,000 votes were cast there, 2,000 more than in the record-breaking election of two years ago, reflecting the heavy vote throughout the State.

For Congress the vote was:

First district, 93 precincts out of 147:

Second district, 121 precincts out of 213:

Third district, 181 precincts out of 273:

Campaigned Vigorously.

Both White and Barrows campaigned vigorously against their opponents whom they described as symbolic of the New Deal.

Dubord stoutly defended the Roosevelt Administration. Brann declared repeatedly that Maine experienced returning prosperity under his and the Democratic Federal Administration.

The Republican candidates were assisted in their campaign by Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, Republican President and vice presidential candidates, who made speeches in Maine attacking the New Deal and appealing for a Republican victory as the opening assault in a national election drive.

In the city of Bath, which Brann carried, Barrows ran only 200 votes behind Dubord.

State police were sent to the Biddeford City Hall to guard ballot boxes after Wilfred P. Hebert, chairman of the Republican city committee, alleged irregularities in voting.

White carried Rockland and Hallowell, the first cities to report complete returns. He took Rockland by 500 votes and Hallowell by about 200. In wards reported from Portland, Augusta and Waterville, White also led although the latter city, a traditional Democratic stronghold, seemed certain to throw its majority to Brann as other wards were reported.

Deer Isle, little island community in Penobscot Bay, which recently was given a Federal grant of more than $300,000 toward construction of a bridge to the mainland, went for White, 275 to 195.

Babcock, Cheered Wildly at A.F.G.E.'s Session, Hints He Would Remain President, if Drafted

By Samuel Lubell.

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 14.—With wild cheers and loud applause pro-Babcock delegates tonight virtually took over the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Supported by District "Progressives" and field liberals, the forces backing Claude Babcock blocked an attempt by the conservative leaders to make his resignation the first order of business and to elect a new president immediately.

The test vote came on an amendment to the presidential rule making the report of the executive council a special order of business. The amended motion was adopted by a vote of 79 to 53 and came as a distinct blow to conservative leaders.

The vote was taken only a few minutes after the delegates cheered Babcock when he took the floor to request that he be permitted to see the sections of the council report on his resignation so that he might defend himself on any charges in the report.

A few minutes later when Babcock rose to correct a reference by Temporary Chairman George Googe to him as "technically" president, saying, "I am actually president," the delegates again broke into cheers and applause—a wild demonstration of the popularity of a man who was forced to resign the presidency because of a "spoils" attack on the Administration.

With the convention in an uproar, conservative leaders moved for a recess after the first section of the executive council's report was read. Pro-Babcock delegates agreed to the recess to permit the mimeographing of the report so copies could be presented to each delegate.

Heartened by the demonstrations, Babcock let it be known that although not a candidate for re-election he would not refuse to be drafted.

The delegates reconvened shortly after 8 p. m. in an atmosphere of excitement, with rumors, on the one hand, of what Babcock intended to do and, on the other, of how he was

6 Orphaned by Crash 'Adopted' By Grandparent, Mother of 12

A graying grandmother came to Washington yesterday from the foothills of North Carolina with this in mind: "I'll raise another pas'l o' young 'uns."

"I've raised 12 already," she said. "Now I'll raise six more."

Mrs. Irene Corley mopped her face, bronzed by a Carolina sun. She whipped a wisp of graying hair from her forehead with hands gnarled from toil, and said wearily:

"Yes, six more."

She was sitting on the steps of her daughter's home at 1301 Fourth street southwest. Around her were clustered her six orphaned grandchildren. They were alone in this world until their grandmother came by train from Mount Holly, N. C., to "look after my daughter's chillun."

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Tompkinson, the parents, were killed Saturday night when a truck sideswiped their machine 9 miles south of Fredericksburg, Va. There is no money in the Tompkinson or Corley families to bury them, but yesterday the Catholic charities of Washington was making arrangements for the funeral.

Meanwhile, the grandmother, who is 59, stayed to nurse the children. She has no money, but her son, James, who has been living here, said he'd find a job somehow.

A bespectacled man of about 29, who came from the Tarheel State three years ago, he hasn't found a job yet.

"But I know I will," he declared.

Gallagher Fires Blast at Lemke, Hails Roosevelt

Declares Dakotan's Money Plank and Coughlin's Teachings Differ.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 14.—The Most Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, Bishop of Detroit, asserting that "the money plank in the Lemke platform is dangerous," said last night that he believed "President Roosevelt has a much better background to work out these monetary problems than this man from the Dakotas."

The bishop's remarks on the candidate indorsed by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin and his National Union for Social Justice were addressed to a meeting of Catholic study clubs here. He is the immediate superior of Father Coughlin.

"I am sure Father Coughlin thinks that if Lemke gets in he can control Lemke," he said. "Well, he couldn't control Roosevelt."

Favors Theories.

The bishop said he favored the theories of Father Coughlin, but declared that the Union Party's monetary plank is not in accord with Coughlin's own teachings. Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, is the party's Presidential candidate.

"The money plank is dangerous because it nationalizes credit and thus would give the Government too much control," he said. "I have wanted to say this because the Catholic Church might be blamed for that money clause."

The bishop emphasized that the Union party is not a Catholic party, and that no Catholic party would be established.

The bishop said communism is the greatest menace confronting the country.

"Money is the key to the whole solution," he said. "We must study it."

Says Plank Is Conservative.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 14 (AP).—Representative William Lemke (Republican), of North Dakota, Union party candidate for President, said here today the party's monetary plank "is the most conservative of the three major parties because it will stabilize and control values."

Representative Lemke commented after being shown a news dispatch quoting the Most Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, Bishop of Detroit, as saying "the money plank in the Lemke platform is dangerous."

"Control of the national bank would not be vested in the Government, but in 48 directors elected by the sovereign people," Lemke said.

"The North Dakota State Bank has saved depositors $100,000,000. Now you can't find a banker in the State who will openly oppose the State bank."

By the Associated Press.

Receipt of nearly $500,000—mostly in small contributions—since January 1 was reported yesterday by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice.

The union listed expenditures of $473,380 between January 1 and August 31 in its report to the clerk of the House of Representatives.

The report said that the only money paid to Father Coughlin during the last three months was $687.50 for traveling expenses.

Its receipts from January 1 to August 31 were set at $489,293, of which $197,462 was collected since June 1.

Rockefeller Donations.

In other reports filed with the clerk, it was shown that four members of the Rockefeller family had donated $20,000 to the Westchester (N. Y.) Republican county committee. Contributions totaling $500 were reported by the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee, and $4,802 by the Democratic Congressional campaign committee.

John D. Rockefeller, sr., John D. Rockefeller, jr., John D. Rockefeller 3d and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., gave $5,000 each to the Westchester Republican county committee, bringing its total receipts between January 1 and August 31 to $28,570.

The Socialist Party listed contributions totaling $13,761 between May 26 and September 10, and expenditures of $12,082 during the same period. The largest individual contribution was $500 from Albert Sprague Coolidge of Cambridge, Mass.

The prohibition national committee, directed by E. L. Eaton of Washington, D. C., reported contributions totaling $7,504 for the first eight months of 1936, and expenditures of $7,585.

Gov. Landon Must Make the Campaign Issues; Democrats Would Stress Recovery.

By Franklyn Waltman

FROM the beginning of this year's Presidential campaign it has been clear that the Republican nominee, Gov. Alf M. Landon, as the challenger, must make the issues and set the pace for the fight if he had any prospect of winning. Under the code duello the challengee has the choice of weapons—but in politics such proprieties are not so closely defined.

WALTMAN.

President Roosevelt, of course, would like to shape the issue of this year's fight. If he could narrow the issue down to the question of whether the American people, in dollars and cents, as a whole and as of today, are better off than they were on March 4, 1933, he would not need to step out of the White House to be assured of victory.

In general that is what the President and the Democratic strategists have attempted to do. Relying on the old political axiom that prosperity absorbs all other issues—and that an incumbent Administration seeking re-election has never failed when economic recovery was moving upward, they have tried to pitch the campaign on that one issue.

Until Gov. Landon's speech at Portland, Me., the Democratic chieftains had been singularly successful in this endeavor. True it is that Gov. Landon, while indorsing part of the New Deal program, had severely criticized its spending and less severely had assailed the maladministration and fumbling of praiseworthy efforts.

Mr. Roosevelt has not yet taken notice of those earlier assaults but his aids have undertaken to sum up Gov. Landon's position as this: That in general he approves of what the New Deal has done, that in general he would continue along the same course if elected, but that he would do so more efficiently and cheaper than the New Deal.

This, they assert, is only a promise and that, anyway, if it can be fulfilled, it will be done by President Roosevelt and the New Dealers because they enjoy experience which Gov. Landon lacks. In other words, assert the New Dealers, the country can expect a balanced budget more quickly if President Roosevelt is re-elected than if Gov. Landon supplants him—because the President and his aids possess a more experienced knowledge of the problem.

This, of course, is the argument which incumbent candidates always make. Frequently experience is sufficiently an asset as to move public sentiment in the direction of those who possess it. But it should do so only when the opposing candidates are in agreement on fundamental issues.

The significance of Gov. Landon's speech in Maine is that it demonstrates between him and President Roosevelt, not a difference only as to methods, but a fundamental cleavage on political principles. On the one side stood Gov. Landon pleading for the restoration of free enterprise in this country, free not only from bureaucracy but also from the restraints imposed by aggregations of wealth and industrial power. He placed on the other side the President, as the champion of a planned economy, NRA and AAA, favoring governmental domination of the Nation's economic life.

True, the issue has not yet been joined. The President has blown alternately hot and cold in his espousal of planned economy schemes. He has created the impression that he firmly believes the country's welfare demands a restoration of the principles which underlay NRA and AAA, even if a constitutional amendment is necessary. Again, he has created the impression that he is through with such schemes and will have no more traffic with them. But he has never flatly repudiated them.

The Democratic platform at Philadelphia adroitly sidestepped the issue and significantly no New Dealer has come forward in two days to challenge or combat Gov. Landon's contentions at Portland. Nevertheless, it is clear that unless President Roosevelt drives ahead toward a planned economy, what we have come to know as the New Deal will be defunct.

Unquestionably Mr. Roosevelt would prefer to avoid the issue raised by Gov. Landon or to sidestep it with generalities. He gave the country in 1932 no inkling that he proposed to launch a program of planned economy—if he had such a program in mind at the time. Perhaps the situation which confronted the President when he was inaugurated justified him in turning his back on his campaign pledges and undertaking an entirely new line of action.

But such justification does not exist today. Mr. Roosevelt with three and one-half years of experience as President surely knows by this time the course he wishes to pursue. If he thinks that the general welfare would best be served by a nationalistic limitation of the country's economic life, he should say so.

If he does believe that, if as Gov. Landon asserted, "the President has changed his mind and recognizes his errors, let him say so—let him say so in plain language."

Until he does say so, the New Dealers will be precluded from asserting that there is no fundamental difference between the President and Gov. Landon. On that basis the debate can go on.

Brief Is Filed To Test Validity Of Holding Act

N. Y. Federal Court Action Charges Company With 'Unclean Hands.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—The first major test to determine the constitutionality of the holding company act got under way today as the Securities and Exchange Commission filed its brief against the Electric Bond & Share Co. in the Southern District Federal Court in New York.

This company, which serves 10 per cent of the total electric customers in the United States, was one of the firms which declined to register under the holding company act, declaring the statute unconstitutional. Suit to compel it to register was brought by the commission last November.

The company based its refusal to register on the ground it would be "irreparably injured." This the commission denied in its brief today and asked the court to restrain it from acting in interstate commerce because it has violated the law in refusing to register.

"Unclean Hands" Charged.

The commission's brief, prepared by John J. Burns, general counsel; Robert H. Jackson, assistant Attorney General; John J. Abt, special counsel, and Benjamin V. Cohen and Thomas G. Corcoran, special assistants to the Attorney General together with nine other counsel, charged the Electric Bond & Share Co. with "unclean hands."

"Defendants have unclean hands because their prayer for affirmative relief is predicated on the fact that they have refused, without legal justification, to register," one section of the brief stated.

"Defendants have unclean hands because of their representations to the Congress," another section read, referring to the testimony before the House committee by S. R. Inch, president of Electric Bond & Share when, the brief alleged, he declared "we are not opposed to any proper regulation which may be necessary for the protection of either investors or rate payers."

Not Entitled to Relief.

Finally, the brief declared the defendants "have failed to prove that they have been damaged, irreparably or otherwise, either by the act or by any action or threat of action by the plaintiff or by any cross-defendant and, therefore, are not entitled to relief in equity."

Commission officials today estimated that only one-tenth of the industry had registered, withholding, they said until the constitutionality of the act had been determined.

They also noted that upward of 50 lawsuits had been fled by utility companies against the commission seeking relief from the registration requirement, but declored the Electric Bond & Share, giant of the industry, was the first company to have proceedings brought against it.

The commission's brief said the Electric Bond & Share embraces utility properties in no fewer than 32 States, from Pennsylvania to Oregon and from Minnesota to Florida, serves 2,487,500 electric customers and derives $214,600,000 yearly in revenues.

Povich's Brother Is Dead in Maine

Bath, Me., Sept. 14 (AP).—Morris E. Povich, 25, Democratic candidate for the State Legislature in today's State election, died late last night of injuries received in an automobile accident at Boothbay Harbor Thursday night.

Death followed upon an operation to relieve pressure on the brain, attendants at a hospital here said. Both of Povich's legs were broken.

Sheriff Arthur R. Greenleaf, of Lincoln County, said a car driven by Edwin Dodge, Boothbay Harbor, struck Povich and Ralph Giles, Boothbay Harbor, as they were changing a tire on Povich's car at the roadside.

Povich is a brother of Shirley Povich, sports editor of The Washington Post.

Second Green Will Hinted; Trial Is On

Elizabethtown, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP). Suggestion of existence of a "second will" and introduction in evidence of a prenuptial agreement purporting to dissolve any claims of the widow highlighted opening arguments today in the battle of two women over the estimated $80,000,000 estate of Col. Surrogate Harry Owen presided at the hearing in Essex County Court on a 180-word will written by the son of the late Hetty Green, famous as the one-time "railroad queen," on March 8, 1908, and filed for probate recently at Port Henry.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Vice President John N. Garner's part in the Democratic campaign will be discussed tomorrow when Garner arrives from Texas for a conference with members of the national committee and other party leaders.

Chairman James A. Farley today said the Vice President—who has been vacationing at his Texas home—would be the guest of the committee at a banquet tomorrow night.

Farley and other leaders want the Vice President to make a campaign tour across the country in the last few weeks before the election.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 14 (AP).—Two rival Socialist tickets were filed with the secretary of state today, each represented by its sponsors as the official slate for the party in Connecticut.

J. Walter Darley, deputy secretary of state, said he would refer the matter to Attorney General Edward J. Daley.

Leaders of the opposing groups—Mayor Jasper McLevy, of Bridgeport, gubernatorial nominee of the right wing, and Devere Allen, left wing leader and that faction's nominee for Governor—said they would carry the fight to the Superior Court.

The split occurred last night at the State Socialist convention, when the convention's constitution committee recommended the State party sever connections with the national organization.

Rustburg, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Combining a defense of the Roosevelt regime with an attack upon "entrenched and selfish greed" of the Republican Party, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, spoke here today in the interest of President Roosevelt and himself in the November election.

The Sixth District Representative declared the election was not one of personalities; that it is not a question of whether Roosevelt or Landon should be elected, but it was whether the humanitarian policies of the New Deal should be continued.

* * * *

Baltimore, Sept. 14 (AP).—Lindsay C. Spencer, chief clerk, said today the Baltimore election board would throw out any general election ballots with the name of William Lemke, Union Party Presidential candidate, or those of his electors written in.

"The law does not permit writeins," Spencer said. "Under the old law they were allowed and provision was made for them. Now it is not."

Writing-in would be the only way Lemke's name could get on the ballot. State's Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor ruled it could not be printed on the regular ballots since it was not offered 15 days before the May primaries as required by the State law.

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover went on an all-day offshore fishing expedition off Montauk, Long Island, today and caught one bluefish.

Mr. Hoover made the trip on the yacht of Harold White, of New York, and was accompained by Lewis L. Straus, New York banker, and George Leboutillier, railroad executive.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 14 (AP).—Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), of Cumberland, seeking re-election from the Sixth Maryland District, said in an address prepared for delivery tonight that old-age pensions open the way for security for those whose age bars them from continued employment in the Nation's industrial system.

Opening the second week of his campaign in Frederick County at a rally sponsored by the county Democratic State central committee, Lewis said the "age of real individualism" when most of the people lived on farms had given way to an "age of industrialism."

"It is clear," he said, "that old-age dependency and old-age pensions represent an industrial phenomenon. They came with the mill, the mine and the factory."

* * * *

Chicago, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Republican National Committee said in a formal statement tonight "the record shows an all-time high in agricultural unemployment."

"Relief expenditures in farm States have soared because foreigners have been allowed to take away the domestic market from American producers," it added. "Thus foreigners and not Americans have the jobs.

"Farm-wage purchasing power is down as a result of New Deal policies. In 1935, crop curtailment contracts with the AAA withheld 33,463,336 tillable acres from crop production. This meant that more than 1,741,028 persons were thrown out of gainful employment in farm States."

* * * *

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Melvin C. Eaton, Republican State chairman, today disputed the claims of James A. Farley, National and State Democratic chief, that Roosevelt would carry New York State by a larger plurality than in 1932.

In a statement Eaton said:

"Mr. Farley's conferences with up-State Democratic leaders must have given him the true insight into the situation but he dares not reveal it, for the details are too harrowing.

"The State of New York is going overwhelmingly Republican in this election. The vote that Gov. Landon will receive upstate will be tremendous. And the New Deal chieftain is in for the surprise of his life when he hears the vote counted in greater New York City."

* * * *

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP).—The recently created American Labor Party, presenting a ticket in the November election headed by President Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman, emerged on a permanent basis in New York State today when it filed incorporation papers with the Secretary of State.

The party in its incorporation papers promises to seek "through legislation and collective bargaining to make every job the best that the human mind can devise as to physical conditions, human relations and wages," and "to secure and maintain the institution of democracy in our industrial and mercantile life in the public interest."

Luigi Antonini, of Yonkers, first vice president of the International Garment Workers Union, was listed as chairman of the party and one of the 21 incorporators. The other incorporators are members of various labor trade unions throughout the State.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Lester S. Parsons, chairman of the Second District Republican committee, today called a meeting of the committee for next Monday night to decide on what action shall be taken to name a candidate to oppose Norman R. Hamilton, of Portsmouth, the Democratic nominee, for the Second District's seat in Congress.

This action became necessary because of the death yesterday of Rear Admiral Herman Osman Stickney, United States Navy, retired, the Republican candidate.

A demand arose among Republicans today to draft former Representative Menalcus Lankford, who served four years in Congress, starting in 1929, as the party's candidate, but Mr. Lankford insisted he would not be a candidate. He now is referee in bankruptcy for this divsion of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, but always was the strongest candidate the G. O. P. could find in this district.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 14 (AP).—Republican leaders said at State campaign headquarters today that they would confer with Second District spokesmen tomorrow on whether to name a successor candidate to Rear Admiral H. O. Stickney, the Second District Republican nominee for Congress, who died Sunday.

Consulate Shut, Americans Flee Bilbao on Ship

Group Arrives in France; Rebels Warn Harbor Is Being Mined.

By the Associated Press.

The State Department last night announced Secretary Hull had authorized temporary abandonment of the American consulate at Bilbao, Spain, so the consul and his staff might flee to safety in France.

The action was ordered after an insurgent warning that the harbors of Bilbao and Santander were being mined and that it would be dangerous after midnight last night for ships to enter or leave those ports.

Reporting this to Washington Sunday, Consul William E. Chapman, whose home is in Oklahoma City, asserted there was no means of leaving except by warship, before the deadline. He asked for instructions as to whether he should leave aboard the American destroyer Kane, which then was available in nearby French waters.

Closing Authorized.

Replying late Sunday night, Secretary Hull authorized the temporary closing of the consulate and ordered Chapman to depart on the Kane with American members of his staff and any other Americans who might wish to leave Bilbao.

Chapman left on the Destroyer at 3:06 p. m. Spanish time yesterday, accompanied by Vice Consul Manuel J. Codoner, of New York City; his wife and son and 15 American nationals and 24 foreigners of other nationalities.

Latest reports said 94 American nationals still were in the Bilbao consular district as late as September 8.

Foreigners Warned.

Saint Jean de Luz, France, Sept. 14 (AP).—Government defenders of Bilbao tonight advised foreigners to leave the city and warned commanders of foreign warships that the harbor would be mined at midnight.

Bilboa is filled with government militiamen who fled nearby San Sebastian when it was abandoned to the rebels Saturday.

The United States destroyer Kane, which a few weeks ago was a target of an unsuccessful bombardment by an unidentified airplane, arrived in this French port tonight with the United States consul at Bilboa, W. E. Chapman, and his wife. The consul said the American consulate had been abadoned.

Loyalists Determined.

Government fighting men determine the harbor of San Sebastian, northern strongholds at Bilbao from attack by land or sea. Their leaders said they also would attempt to mine the harbor of San Sebastian.

Floating explosives, they said, would be strung across the harbor of Portugalutte—the port of Bilbao—at midnight after British destroyers and the German cruiser Leipzig put out with the last foreign refugees.

The government junta indicated it expected the Fascist rebels would subject the city to a heavy air bombardment preceding a land attack.

The destroyer Kane also carried 60 Spanish refugees who were taken to Bordeaux.

$14,000,000 Is Seized.

Madrid, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Spanish government, renewing its search of the homes of wealthy aristocrats, tonight announced seizure of more than $14,000,000 in cash, negotiable securities and jewels.

Meanwhile, secret police pressed investigation of an asserted plot to kill President Manuel Azana and his cabinet officers.

Claiming new success in battle, the war ministry said 300 Fascist insurgents were killed in battle near northwestern Gijon.

Nine persons were held under arrest in the asserted assassination plot, antiespionage police said. They charged the plot was against Azana, Premier Francisco Largo Caballero, the woman Communist worker, La Passionara; Air Minister Indalecio Prieto and Gen. Mulio Mangada.

Miners Advancing.

Miners fighting for the government were reported advancing in the Asturian area with dynamite. A rebel column, the war ministry said, was forced to retreat in the Tardienta section in Aragon after an artillery duel.

Sharp fighting was reported in the Naval Peral sector but with little progress on either side.

Efforts were continued to prevail upon rebel prisoners in the Toledo Alcazar to accept an offer of safety to women and children.

The offer was made by members of the Foreign Diplomatic Corps. The Chilean Ambassador, Aurelio Nunez Morgado, acting for the corps, said: "I am still hopeful. I plan to make as many trips to the Alcazar as may be necessary to induce those within to let their women and children escape."

Rebel soldiers, with many of their womenfolk, have held the Alcazar for almost two months—since the first week of the civil war.

ganda and more especially to a Europe battered and shaken to its very foundations.

"These tragic happenings in Spain speak to Europe and the whole world and proclaim once more to what extent the very foundations of all order, all culture and all civilization are being menaced."

"Satanic preparation," the Pontiff said sadly, has relighted in Spain "that flame of hatred and savage persecution which has been confessedly reserved for the Catholic Church—and manifest "in subversive attacks of every kind and order, from Russia to China and from Mexico to South America."

Most horrifying of all, he said of the Spanish conflict: "Brothers have murdered brothers. Civil war between a common fatherland!

"God knows that war, when in the least tragic of circumstances, is always something so fearful and so inhuman.

"But what is to be said when war is fratricidal? It has been well said the blood of a single man shed by the hand of his brothers more than enough for all time and for the whole earth."

And, he mourned, subversive attacks are accompanied by "most astute propaganda" aimed at stirring up and arming the masses "and throwing them madly against every form of institution, human and divine."

Saying the Catholic Church is the bulwark against communism, the Pope exclaimed: "The Catholic press has been persistently suspected and increasingly hampered" while freedom "has been shown to the press of those whose mission and purpose, it would seem, is to spread confusion among ideas and to mislead by falsifying facts.

The Holy Father mourned "that general wave of immorality which more and more is breaking down every restraint and law" and quenching "in so many souls every sense of modesty, dignity, conscience and responsibility * * *."

He called upon public authority to sense its responsibility in this matter.

Prolonged applause greeted the conclusion of his address.

In addition to the refugees, some Spanish families living in Italy were present. The counselor of the Spanish Embassy to the Holy See attended.

But the Spanish ambassador from Madrid, Luis Zulueta, did not attend. He recently appealed to the Pope to temper his speech on Spain. Zulueta made no comment on today's address.

Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, came by motor car from Rome. He spoke briefly, after the Holy Father celebrated mass in the private chapel.

The Pope reached the throne room of his villa as the deep notes of the Castel Gandolfo bell tolled. He was assisted by two secretaries and moved slowly. He raised his hand in brief blessing for the refugees, then began his address.

Ousted Cornell Janitor Kills Woman and Self

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP).—Carrying out what police said was a carefully planned "revenge scheme," Harry L. Jeffery of Varna, former janitor of the Animal Husbandry Buildinng, Cornell University, today shot to death Miss Viola Elver, 40, in an office in the building, then killed himself.

Only the fact that he was caught in a shower while conducting students on a tour of the campus, saved the life of Dr. F. B. Morrison, animal husbandry nutrition professor and head of the department, police said. Morrison, police said, had reprimanded Jeffery for unsatisfactory work, resulting in Jeffery's resignation.

Austria, Italy to Talk On Former's Nazi Pact

Rome, Sept. 14 (AP).—Austrian Foreign Minister Guido Schmidt arrived from Vienna tonight for conversations with Premier Mussolini and Italian Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano on central European policies.

Diplomatic circles said Schmidt and Italian leaders first would discuss results of the Austro-German accord of last July which as yet has not met Italy's complete approval.

Schmidt, it was understood, seeks to smooth over Italy's objection, Italy is believed to be opposed to any marked attempts at German infiltration in central Europe.

St. Charles, Mo., Sept. 14 (AP).—Elopers who intend to avail themselves of St. Charles' nocturnal hospitality in the future will have to arrive before midnight.

7th Headless Body Discovered in Ohio

Cleveland, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—A seventh headless body was found tonight by two East Cleveland boys and their dog, as 25 Cleveland detectives bent their energies to the capture of the perverted killer, who last week dismembered the body of an unidentified young man and dumped it into Wild Kingsbury Run.

Buried in a prune box, covered by burlap, the body was wired crudely together and apparently was that of a woman. Loose earth indicated the burial was recent, although the condition of the corpse suggested th ekilling might have been done some time ago.

Lost Respect for Democracy.

"For 15 years we had ample opportunity to experience the benefits of Western democracy. We lost all respect for it. No wonder we feel sympathy for the barricaded states—in democracy we see no stable system; only a form of transition.

"We cannot help feeling anxiety that one or another of the democratic countries may become victim of a system which we hate irreconcilably. This hatred is not due to doctrinal opposition but to the fact that this brutal and insane doctrine (bolshevism) threatens our existence.

"We shall combat Moscow if it attempts to bring the Spanish disaster to Germany. I cannot practice a regime which, as soon as it seizes power, frees all criminals and gives these brutes rule over the people. We do not want to see Jews, as in Russia, occupying 98 per cent of the leading positions.

"Moscow remains Moscow and Germany is Germany. We do not want to use our army to impose upon other nations a system which they do not want to accept. We want only to defend National Socialism and Germany."

Assails Communist Agents.

Referring scathingly to alleged communist agents who "wander about all countries inciting the people to civil war," Hitler said.

"When their movement fails, they return to the safety of Moscow. Everywhere they propagate intervention and collect money. They would organize Germany as their brigade of death."

In the afternoon, Hitler said wartime Germany broke down only because of the political weakness of the Reich.

"Today, however, the Reich is lined up in great columns as you are lined up before me," he cried. "We know our nation cannot be saved by weaklings and the future belongs to the courageous alone. In 10 years every one of you will be happier than ever before. The youth of today will not work in offices and factories but will be hardened by movements in the open air."

Must See His Ears First.

Moscow, Sept. 14 (AP).—Hitler, the official Soviet press commented today, has as much chance of seeing the Kraine, Urals and Siberia "as he has of seeing his own ears."

"We know now the modest dreams of Mr. Hitler," the newspapers said of his Nurnberg aspirations for Soviet soil and his sarcastic references to the five-pointed red star, symbol of Communist Russia.

"But they are vain. As easily could the promoters of the Nurnberg circus see their own ears as our territory.

"The Soviets are strong and prepared. When the time comes it will provide a bitter disappointment for those who suffer such hysterical dreams."

Meanwhile, the campaign to aid victims of the Spanish revolution, suddenly soft-pedalled six weeks ago, was renewed unexpectedly by the organ of the trade unions, which announced it was sponsoring the collection of funds among Soviet women.

It was stated the money would go to provide food and relief for "the children and women of the Spanish people, who are defending their democratic republic against Fascist insurgents."

British Rush to Aid Ship.

Gibraltar, Sept. 14 (AP).—For the second time during the Spanish Civil War, British naval forces today rushed to the aid of the British steamer Gibel Zerjon. The little steamer, engaged in traffic between western Mediterranean ports, radioed it had been approached by the loyalist Spanish submarine Alcala Galiano and warned not to enter Melilla, rebel port in Spanish Morocco. The Gibel Zerjon was ordered to return to Gibraltar.

Officials here at once despatched a destroyer to the aid of the steamer. Meanwhile, however, two rebel airplanes appeared and bombed and damaged the Alcala Galiano. The Spanish warship limped away and the Gibel Zerjon entered Melilla harbor safely.

French 'Regret' Blast at Bullitt By Newspaper

Envoy Designate Brands as Absurd Charge He Is 'Soviet Agent.'

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 14.—The French government today expressed its "regrets" to the United States charge d'affaires, Edwin C. Wilson, for a royalist newspaper's editorial attack on United States Ambassador-Designate William C. Bullitt.

The newspaper, Action Francaise, charged Bullitt was acting as a "Soviet agent," and accused him of pro-Russian sympathies.

(Bullitt, former United States Ambassador to Moscow, in Washington yesterday, termed the newspaper attack "too absurd and ridiculous to warrant any comment.")

The French government's regrets were expressed through Pierre Vienot, of the foreign office.

The incident was considered closed by officials at both the French foreign office and the American Embassy.

Charges War Promotion.

The newspaper charged Bullitt was trying to promote a Franco-German war "which Dictator Josef Stalin of Russia desires."

Meanwhile, owners of Lille Textile Mills, fearful lest their factories "be sovietized," tonight defied government efforts to grant a 40-hour week to labor.

Owners of the mills, with 35,000 workers on strike, demanded the right to prevent "establishment of Soviets" in their plants—held by the workers.

Will Take Measures.

Said Roger Salengro, minister of the interior:

"As soon as we know exactly what the mill operators mean, we will take the necessary measures."

Premier Blum's efforts to establish the 40-hour week and other labor concessions marked the second phase of his labor reform drive.

The mill operators gave their answer to Blum's proposal for government arbitration of the strikes in a message transmitted to the premier by telephone.

It warned if Blum took it upon himself to impose his measures on the owners he, at least, could not oblige them to ratify his act.

"He who gives the order must himself accept the responsibility," the message added.

Ken Maynard, FilmStar, Faces Assault Charge

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 14 (AP).—Ken Maynard, movie cowboy, was free on $25 bond tonight, pending arraignment in municipal court tomorrow on an assault charge filed by a garage employe.

The plaintiff, Hubert McNeal, 36, said Maynard struck him with his fist, breaking his glasses and wrist watch, during an altercation over a $1.75 garage bill the movie cowboy protested. Maynard appeared voluntarily after his arrest had been ordered and said:

"All I did was push him."

3,000 British Troops Sail for Palestine

London, Sept. 14 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Three thousand British troops sailed today for Palestine. The second contingent of approximately 15,000 troops ordered to the Holy Land to suppress the 22-week-old Arab disorders.

Lieut. Gen. J. G. Dill, who has been placed in supreme command of British military forces in Palestine, was reported to have arrived at Haifa yesterday.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring little spots often result from a slight, temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing, or sometimes they are more persistent due to deeper internal causes.

While properly treating the underlying cause, you can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment that will keep the medication in contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For more than 40 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritation and aids healing. It also treats the oil pores where many surface pimples start. Washing first with Resinol Soap quickens the pleasing results.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample write Resinol, Dept. 10, Baltimore, Md.

Beauty That Words Cannot Describe . . . .

THERE is something about the charm of the wood, shaped and fashioned by skilled craftsmen, which is difficult to put into words. It is like the atmosphere of a master painting, or the aura of a brilliant jewel; one senses and enjoys, rather than attempting to describe it. That is the way about this 18th Century Type Bedroom Suite. It has many of the characteristics of the master designer, Sheraton. The straight turned and fluted leg was a favorite form of his. And, like others of the group of craftsmen living and working in the Golden Age of furniture, Sheraton liked best to work in mahogany. The bed panels and drawer fronts of the cases are of hand-matched, carefully selected crotch mahogany figure—some of the most beautiful you ever laid eyes on—and, like all Authentic Registered Grand Rapids Furniture, the workmanship and finish throughout is indicative of quality. But, didn't we say up above that words could not describe this suite! We are sure you will agree with us when you glance at this suite. We might add that the seven pieces at $340 include a dresser and vanity, both with separate wall mirrors; a chest of drawers, two beds, night table and bench for the vanity. At $285, the suite is here with double bed—six pieces in all. See this suite today.

Landon Favors Expanded Soil, Water Program

Would Provide Jobs by Land Utilization Plan, Nominee Asserts.

Landon boarded his special train early this afternoon at Nashua, after an overnight visit at the home of Robert B. Choate, Boston editor, near Salem, Mass. Several thousand people were waiting at the station in the little New Hampshire town as his car drew up to the platform. They greeted him with cheers.

Next to the rear platform of the waiting train was standing a baby elephant, less than 4 feet high. The elephant was introduced to him as "Suzanna." Landon laughed, and, reaching down, grasped the elephant's trunk, shaking it as though he were shaking hands. Some one handed the candidate a handful of lump sugar. His speech was delayed for several minutes as he coaxed Suzanna to eat it from his hand. She wasn't particularly enthusiastic.

Landon's first mention of the conservation program was made at Springfield, Mass. He told the audience gathered at his train that "You may search in vain for a national land-use program in Washington.

"There are good plans in the pigeon holes in Washington," he said. "I even submitted one myself two years ago."

He called attention to the fact that in the West the problem is lack of rain and that in the region through which he was traveling today it was too much rain.

"In the field of soil and water conservation," he said, "lies a work in which the Federal Government should take a far more aggressive part than it yet has done, working, of course, in co-operation with the States. Not alone will it conserve our basic resources, but it will provide an immense amount of genuine employment, as contrasted to the present system of makeshift jobs."

Praises Coolidge.

At Pittsfield, Mass., near Northampton, home of Calvin Coolidge, Landon paid tribute to the former President.

"I can never visit New England without thinking of Calvin Coolidge," he said. "If I have read the record of his life correctly, a large measure of his long success was due to the fact that before acting he always stopped to think twice."

He told his audience that the American people are principally interested in two things: Real work at real wages, and their own freedom, "freedom of assembly, freedom of education, freedom of enterprise, and that freedom which only freedom of opportunity can provide."

"We must unite," he said, "in seeing to it that the money appropriated for relief goes to the needy among our fellow citizens and not one penny to those who are trying to play politics at the expense of the victims of the depression."

Among the visitors on the Landon train as it passed through Massachusetts was Frank N. B. Buchman, head of the Buchman Movement, or Oxford Group, a religious movement. Landon greeted him cordially.

Expresses Interest.

At Pittsfield, headquarters of the group, Landon expressed interest in the movement.

"I've watched with interest the growth of the Oxford Movement in this country," he said. "Since this is the permanent center of the Oxford Movement, I have another reason for wanting to stay here longer.

"It exemplifies the practical application to our daily lives of Divine guidance, which we all need so much."

"Gov. Landon, son of the sod.

"Is able to govern when governed by God.

"Listen to God. He'll give to you

"His plan to see America through."

At Worcester, Mass., the private car of Paul Block was drawn up beside the special train. Block expected to have it attached to the train, but the special pulled out without it. Block was aboard the train, however. The car is the one formerly owned by Edward B. McLean, of Washington.

In Good Spirits.

The Kansas Governor was in good spirits as he left New England and swung into upper New York. Crowds lined station platforms at every stop and his train was repeatedly delayed as he lingered to shake hands with scores. Driving from Salem to Nashua, the candidate stopped several times to shake hands with tourists who were parked along the road. Once he stopped at a wayside stand and bought a basket of apples from a farm boy.

"Aren't you Alf Landon?" asked the excited boy.

The Governor smilingly admitted that he was.

The Governor's discussion of soil conservation was the first mention he had made of the subject since his meeting with President Roosevelt in Des Moines. It may have contained a clew as to what he said to the President at that time. Landon has repeatedly insisted relief must be continued as long as there is need for it. His conservation discussion indicated an intention to continue work relief, at least so far as workers can be employed in a land-use program.

Leaving Massachusetts, Landon greeted crowds at Albany, Schenectady, Utica and Syracuse.

To Speak Later in Boston.

He avoided appearing in Boston on both the trip to Portland, Me., where he spoke last Saturday night, and on the return trip. He expects to return to Boston to make a major speech later in the campaign.

The trip today took Landon through two States which have primary elections tomorrow, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. In both States he carefully avoided any reference to the elections. He privately expressed satisfaction with conditions as he found them in New England and was cheered by repeated reports of expected Republican victory in November.

At Albany a group of farm leaders representing New York and adjoining States boarded the train and traveled with him as far as Syracuse, discussing a farm program for the Northeast. The leaders represented various dairy and farm groups of this section.

The Landon train will arrive in Chicago early tomorrow morning. The Governor will make at least 11 rear platform talks, talks which he refers to as his back-porch campaign, in Illinois and Missouri, arriving in Topeka tomorrow night.

Train Wreck Charges Given to Grand Jury

Coshocton, Ohio, Sept. 14 (AP).—Charges of planning to wreck a Pennsylvania train and rob its passengers were placed before a special grand jury today against three men and the mother of a 4-month-old child.

Prosecutor Russell E. Lyons said the quartet—Mrs. Edith West, 30; her brother, Albert Buckmaster, 21, and Wayne and Norman Hartley, 24 and 30, respectively—confessed they plotted the robbery to get money to obtain a divorce for Mrs. West so she could marry Wayne Hartley. They were traced through a junk dealer, who said he bought bolts removed from railroad tracks.

Furs Bring $610,000.

St. Louis, Sept. 14 (AP).—Furs to delight milady—20,526 Alaskan sealskins, 509 blue fox and 15 white fox pelts—were sold today at a semiannual auction on behalf of the Government for $610,000. The sealskins represented part of the seasonal catch of hunters supervised by the United States Bureau of Fisheries under a treaty with Canada and Japan. The skins brought an average of $30 each.

News of Parley On Insurance Hailed by Knox

'It's Time for Government to Be Worried,' He Tells Montana Audience.

Answer Seen.

The first speculations had held the Administration was calling the conference to prepare comparative insurance company financial condition statements to counteract Knox's charges. The paragraph in question in Knox's speech is as follows:

"The present Administration has been for four years giving lip service to security and welfare and today no life insurance policy is secure; no savings account is safe."

In Chicago A. A. Ballantine, of New York, Undersecretary of the Treasury in the Hoover Administration, asserted:

"No one questions the ability of these savings banks and these life insurance companies to pay the number of dollars called for in the bank books or the life-insurance policies. It is a question of whether those dollars will be worth anything if the Roosevelt spending continues.

"The big thing is that if the Roosevelt Administration continues its present spending, politics, waste and graft, the time is coming when Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Tugwell will be forced, whether they like it or not, to go to printing-press money."

Also from Chicago at once came a statement by John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, which also released the Ballantine charges. Hamilton said:

"The conference was undoubtedly fixed to offset the bad news which Mr. Roosevelt will have tomorrow from Maine."

William Hard, Republican radio propagandist, said in his regular broadcast last night that "it is to be gravely feared that the President will ask them (the insurance executives) merely about the surface safety of those policies and not about the danger of inflation and the possible destruction of their purchasing power."

Repeats Claim.

But the heaviest shots in this new political development were fired by Col. Knox, the author of the incident. He discarded most of a prepared speech to repeat his claim that life insurance and savings accounts have been endangered by the New Deal fiscal policies.

He cited four addresses which President Roosevelt made in 1932, assailing the Hoover Administration for "deficit after deficit" and quoted the President in that year as asserting that upon the financial stability of the United States depends the stability . . . of the entire banking, saving and insurance system."

After Knox referred to his statements at Allentown a week ago, according to the Associated Press, he continued thusly:

"It (the Allentown statement) refers solely to the value of the money in which insurance is paid and savings are kept. No intelligent person could possibly construe it as referring to the solvency of any bank, insurance company or other private enterprise. It could only refer to the blind squandering and credit adulteration by the Government.

"But a partisan and publicity-seeking political department head of Pennsylvania has seen fit to question this and deliberately to construe it as an attack on the banks and insurance companies.

Babcock Hailed At Convention; May Be Drafted

Support for Babcock in his fight against the presidential rule was voted unanimously by delegates from 21 field lodges at a special caucus held before the night session opened. A resolution calling for the scrapping of all proposed rules in conflict with the constitution also was approved by the caucus.

The night session had hardly opened than announcement was made by the credentials committee that delegates from the Social Security Board, Farm Credit, SEC and Railroad Retirement Board, so-called "New Deal" lodges with temporary certificates, had been refused seats because the executive council had revoked their certificates.

E. J. Cox, president of the Railroad Retirement Board, leaped to his feet in protest, contending the the lodge had a permanent charter. Other protests followed, with motions and counter-motions. The parliamentary tangle which developed finally was settled by a motion to consider each lodge separately.

Little convention business was completed at the opening session this morning, the delegates recessing for a visit to Henry Ford's Greenfield Village soon after hearing Representative Robert Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, defend the Roosevelt Administration against "spoils" accusations. His speech apparently was intended just as much for the consumption of Detroit, which holds its primary elections tomorrow, as for the convention delegates.

denberg, of Michigan as "typical of those holier-than-thou Republicans who pay lip service to the civil service system, but don't believe it." He criticized Gov. Landon for not setting up a civil service system in Kansas and cited figures to show that in the three and a half years of the Roosevelt Administration more jobs have been added to the civil service system than in the 12 years under Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

Twice he assailed Senator Van-

Ramspeck cited an editorial in The Washington Post criticizing certain features of a measure introduced by him for the extension of the civil service to all temporary agencies by classified competitive examination as "another example of the inconsistency with which Republicans talk of Roosevelt wrecking the civil service system, yet opposing reforms in the system when proposed."

Ramspeck warned the convention that "whichever party comes into power after the elections" Government employes will be faced with an economy drive, and "must be on guard to hold what privileges they have, and not think of adding to them."

Liberalization of the retirement system would increase the payment of employes into the fund, he warned, and would not receive the approval of Congress unless the employes showed willingness to make such payments. He opposed a widow's annuity as a pension but favored the adoption of an optional system of retirement that would permit employes to purchase an additional annuity for their children if they wished.

manager and director of Universal. He was then 21 years old.

Within a few years, he signed a contract as a producer at the studio which was the forerunner of M-G-M.

It was there he met Miss Shearer.

After their marriage in 1928, she often told the story of his courtship. She said he was excessively bashful, and that for years, they were "Miss Shearer" and "Mr. Thalberg" to each other. Despite daily meetings in the course of their work in the studio, she recalled, it was nearly six months before he asked her for a "date."

Among the screen players Thalberg helped to stardom were John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, Lon Chaney, Ramon Navarro, Robert Montgomery and Clark Gable.

He produced some of Hollywood's most lavish films during the era of the silent screen, and took the advent of sound in stride. Associates said his quick ability to size up both player talent and story material made him almost unique in production ranks.

Friends today said Thalberg's health had been delicate since childhold. Four years ago he was stricken with pneumonia which they said left his heart in a seriously weakened condition.

Gabrilowitsch, Famous Pianist, Dies in Detroit

From 1904 to 1914 Gabrilowitsch resided, for part of the year in Munich, where he conducted orchestral concerts, and at intervals from 1907 to 1918 he conducted in New York. In 1918 he became permanent conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, retaining that position until last year, when he was obliged to relinquish it because of ill health.

Both as a pianist and a conductor he established himself as an artist of the first rank. His piano playing was characterized by a fine lyricism and a poetic power of interpretation coupled with an extreme sensitiveness to color values. He was last heard in Washington in 1934 in a joint recital with Albert Spalding, the American violinist.

His repertoire of piano literature was unusually large, and he made use of it in a series of six recitals which he gave many times in Europe during the season of 1912-13 to illustrate the historical growth of the piano concerto. In these recitals he played concertos by Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Weber, Rubinstein, Tschaikowski, Liszt, Brahms, Saint-Saens, Rachmaninoff, Franck's "Variations Symphonique", and the "Burlesca" of Richard Strauss.

In 1915-16 he presented another series of six historical recitals in New York, the programs ranging chronologically from William Byrd to Cyril Scott.

As a composer, Gabrilowitsch is not as well known as he deserves to be. His output was not large, but the quality of the writing is eloquent and sincere. His published works include sets of two to five piano pieces, Op. 1, 3, 10 and 12; sets of two to three songs, Op. 5, 9 and 11; a "Theme Varie" and a "Melodie" for piano, Op. 4 and 8; an "Elegy" for violoncello and piano, Op. 7, and an "Overture Rhapsodie" for orchestra, Op. 6.

Named to Elks Post.

Contract Is Let For the G. A. R. Parade Finale

In preparation for the last parade of the remnants of the Grand Army of the Republic, the District Commissioners yesterday awarded a contract for $1,900 to a Washington builder to construct a reviewing stand on Pennsylvania avenue in front of the White House.

It was announced that high and grade school children might get a holiday two days after school opens Monday to witness the historic finale of the G. A. R.

Leaders of the encampment and Women's Relief Corps national meeting, scheduled to begin here Sunday, said they were hopeful both schools and Government departments would be closed.

The encampment begins here next Sunday, and the parade will go up Pennsylvania avenue from Twelfth street, past the White House, to Seventeenth street, according to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The $15,000 appropriation for the seventieth annual encampment must be expended under the District Commissioners, although arrangements are in charge of a special citizens' committee, headed by George Offutt.

Security Is Goal, Little Entente Says

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 14 (AP).—A communique of the Little Entente—Rumania, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia—tonight assured the world that steps were taken "to protect the security and independence of the member states."

The communique, however, contained no reference to co-operative armament agreements believed to have been a matter of discussion among the foreign ministers of the three countries.

The communique said the Little Entente would adhere to the League of Nations; expressed regret over the Austrian compulsory military service law, and raised the question of "treaty violations in southeastern Europe."

Advocates of the armament agreements, which would make the three nations one of Europe's strongest military components, urged that the armies prepare to act as units of the whole group in an emergency.

It also was recommended that the armies be equipped on a co-operative basis with virtually no exchange of money, and with each army contributing technical skill, factories and raw materials.

Suspect Is Charged With Murder Plot

Kansas City, Sept. 14 (AP).—The death of "Crying Hank" Burke, a transient, resulted today in the filing of a murder charge against Charles D. Ernest, 45-year-old law school graduate and cleaning plant operator arrested in a police-instigated insurance plot investigation.

Police said two other deaths were under investigation and that several persons told them Ernest had offered to take out insurance on their lives and pay the premiums himself.

The cleaning shop proprietor was arrested September 5, when police first disclosed they have been investigating for more than a year a theory that several penniless drifters who died under mysterious circumstances were insurance plot victims.

William J. Gilwee, assistant prosecutor, said Burke was insured for $1,800 and that he had given notes for the total amount of his insurance to Ernest.

$25,000 in Furs Stolen.

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Eight men stole furs valued by the owners at $25,000 to $35,000 today from the Trencher Furs, Inc., shop at 277 Grand street. The bandits forced 12 employes, including two women, into a back room, then collected the furs and disappeared.

Longshoremen Demand Wage Scale Increase

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—The International Longshoremen's Association today presented demands to shipping representatives for higher wages in connection with the renewal of union contracts which expire September 30.

The Longshoremen's delegates, headed by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the union, met with officials of the New York Shipping Association and asked for regular pay of $1 an hour, an increase of five cents over the present rate, and $1.50 an hour for overtime, an increase of 15 cents, on the basis of a 40-hour week instead of the present 44-hour week. The shippers took the demands under advisement.

Nicaragua Honors American Consul

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 14 (AP).—Fletcher Warren, United States consul and secretary of the legation here, was decorated today for his heroism during an uprising last May.

The Nicaraguan medal of merit was pinned on him by President Carlos Brenes Jarquin in recognition of his daring last May 31 when he drove an automobile up Tiscara Hill during a battle between forces entrenched around the Presidential palace on the summit and others at the foot.

Warren stuck a small American flag in the radiator of his auto and braved firing in order to save some noncombatant men and women caught between the lines.

His venture caused both sides to cease firing with the result many lives were saved.

The ceremony was held at the foot of Tiscara Hill in a colorful setting with the entire diplomatic corps and most of the populace attending.

Chicago Pupils Back Principal In Hugging Row

Strike in Protest Against Ouster; Board Drops Teacher Accusers.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Amid a chorus of jeers, picketing, banner waving and oratory, the Union Ridge School reopened today—but the demonstration only added fuel to the fire of controversy over charges of classroom hugging.

Charles O'Hearn, who was dismissed as principal by the Cook County superintendent of schools after three teachers accused him of caressing them during the last term, returned in the capacity of "business manager."

The three teachers, who were dismissed by the schcool board of suburban Norwood Park during the row, returned, too, but only temporarily.

Pupils Form Picket Lines.

Some 70 pupils from the upper grades, many of them accompanied by their mothers, stepped into the picket lines as soon as the doors were opened.

"Stand by O'Hearn," their banners set forth.

One matron, wearing a yellow blouse bearing a newspaper picture of the lean, 35-year-old former principal, urged the crowd:

"Storm the office of Noble J. Puffer (county school superintendent) and demand the reinstatement of O'Hearn. We're for O'Hearn and we're going to have him."

The three erstwhile instructors—Misses Larinda Clery and Clarabelle Lindsay and Mrs. Mary Hammond—were greeted with boos as they went to the school to make formal application for the return of their jobs.

Meets Them at Door.

Herman Reussow, president of the community's school board, met them at the door. The former teachers explained the three young men who accompanied them were witnesses.

"Well," said Reussow, as O'Hearn looked on in silence, "let them be witnesses to my statement that your services are no longer required."

"We're going to take this to court," Miss Lindsay announced, ending the informal conference.

O'Hearn, appointed business manager without salary by the school board to circumvent the superintendent's dismissal order, said he would urge the strikers to go to class tomorrow.

Beer-Drunk Duck, Master Lectured

San Francisco, Sept. 14 (AP).—The case of the drunken drake and the master who gave it beer came before Municipal Judge Thomas Foley today and the court ruled the strange pair must never get intoxicated again.

Judge Foley dismissed a charge of intoxication against John L. Green, and gave him a 30-day suspended sentence on a charge of cruelty to animals.

The duck, named "Brother Crawford," was in court, apparently with a terrible hangover from drinking too much beer.

Dr. Harry Fremont, veterinarian of the society for prevention of cruelty to animals, said he had given the duck a "sousemeter" test and found it in the last stages of intoxication.

"Brother Crawford likes beer," Green explained. "I was told water was not pure. Brother Crawford has a great career in Hollywood and I don't wish to ruin it with bad water."

Testimony showed Green and the duck had visited 12 saloons in one day.

To Pay for Passage Home

Maj. Ramon Franco, former air attache of the Spanish Embassy, will auction his rare art treasures to raise money to pay passage for himself, his wife and daughter back to his native land, where he plans to fight for the rebel cause. Linda Valle, of 1321 M street northwest, examines two of the objects d'art.

Calderon Pays Farewell Visit To Roosevelt at White House

Ex-Spanish Envoy Ready to Quit U. S.; Maj Franco to Sell Family Treasures to Gain Price of Passage to War Scene.

Don Luis Calderon, former Spanish Ambassador, called at the White House yesterday to say good-by to President Roosevelt, thus officially completing his exit from the Capital where he served two years.

At the same time it became known that Maj. Ramon Franco, former air attache at the Spanish embassy, had offered for sale all his family treasures to raise money to pay passage for himself, wife and daughter back to the homeland, where he intends to join the fighting.

The tall, gray-haired ambassador who resigned when the recently formed Spanish cabinet was learned to include two Communists, made his first public appearance in a fortnight, when he called to bid farewell. He had been in seclusion, and only the arrival in Washington of a temporary charge d'affaires, Enrique de la Casa, enabled him to take his leave of the city.

Maj. Franco denied last night that he had any intention of flying back to Spain. He said such a flight was out of the question because of the expense. He will sail on board ship in two or three weeks, as soon as his personal effects are disposed of.

Maj. Franco is anxious to join his brother, Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the Fascist rebels, he said last night, because he wishes to avenge the deaths of two friends who were executed by the Spanish loyalists. The friends had accompanied him on his epochal flight from Cadiz to Buenos Aires in 1926, an air journey which made him Spain's greatest aviation hero.

The Spanish press continued to mention Fernando de los Rios as the ambassador to succeed De Calderon here, although the charge d'affaires at the embassy has received no official notification that the professor-politician had been named by his government. State Department officials have not been informed as to the time of the new ambassador's arrival.

Hurricane in Atlantic 1,000 Miles Off Coast

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 14 (AP).—More than 1,000 miles from the American coast, a tropical hurricane churned slowly through the Atlantic Ocean tonight.

Afternoon Weather Bureau reports placed the center of the disturbance about 550 miles northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico. The Cuban National Observatory reported the storm was 550 miles south by southeast of Bermuda. Both said it was moving north-northwestward. Observers said there was no danger to the coast of the United States if it continued the present course.

'Premonition' of Death.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Archie John Thaxton had a premonition that her 2-year-old son was struggling in the waters of an irrigation ditch. She ran screaming from the home of her parents, where she was visiting, and started searching for the baby. A few minutes later the boy's body was found in a nearby irrigation ditch.

1854 American Dime Found in Buried City

New York, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Cyril von Baumann returned today from the jungles of Ecuador, where he and Andre Roosevelt, cousin of the President, have been searching for lost cities.

They crept past head-hunting tribes, he said, and escaped from snakes 60 feet long. After 50 days they came to a buried city in a section of the jungle where no white man is supposed to have been, and there they found a buried city.

Porters began to dig. All day they worked and at last their spades turned up something. It was an American dime—dated 1854.

Police and Pickets Clash.

Salinas, Calif., Sept. 14 (AP).—Four encounters between police and pickets took place today as the ten-day strike of lettuce workers neared the "zero hour." The brief skirmishes came as the growers and shippers prepared to resume movement of their $2,000,000 crop.

But Not The Whole Truth.

In the years immediately following the war there was a story told about the canny French which, for reasons to be disclosed, recurs to mind today.

During the German occupation of northeastern France many factories were destroyed, the cost of which the French government, with good reason, charged up in its bill for German reparations. Many of these ruined factories, however, were antiquated and poorly located. Consequently, in rebuilding, one large modern establishment was frequently made to take the place of three or four of those destroyed.

In its statistics of reconstruction in the devastated areas the French government somehow neglected to draw attention to this procedure. On the contrary, when three extensive modern factories had been built to replace ten little ones destroyed in a particular commune, it was announced that industrial reconstruction in that area was only 30 per cent complete. Such assertions were used as justification for insisting that Germany come across with further reparation payments.

Much the same shrewd, but scarcely honest, technique is ardently employed by those who have been denouncing Gov. Landon for the closing of schools in Kansas during his administration of that State. Wittingly or unwittingly, much stress has been laid on the assertion that several hundred Kansas elementary schools have been discontinued during the depression period.

It is now revealed, through the good offices of Senator Hale, of Maine, that these assertions are on a par with the tactics used by the subtle French propagandists. All the schools which were closed in Kansas, it appears, were small and isolated rural institutions. Closing them did not mean elimination of school facilities for a single child, but merely consolidation of outlying school districts to provide better teaching and more modern facilities, with free transportation afforded for those pupils who have to travel farther as a result of the change.

This particular attempt to defame Gov. Landon was always suspect from the mere fact that the percentage of illiteracy in Kansas is far lower than the national average and steadily improving. It would indeed be strange if a State with less illiteracy, proportionate to population, than exists in the District of Columbia should carry out the reactionary policy charged against the Landon administration.

But the unscrupulous propagandist does not bother as to the logic of his accusations, provided there is a fair chance to make them stick. Perhaps the Democratic National Committee remembered that the French statistics on reconstruction in the devastated areas were extremely successful propaganda in the decade following the war.

Made In America.

In 1892, having paid for his steamship passage with savings from three years' wages as a glassblower, a young Swedish boy presented himself before the immigration authorities in New York. He explained that his father had died when he was 12 and his mother five years afterward. Thirty-one years later he was elected to the highest legislative assembly in the land. His name was Magnus Johnson, and he died on Sunday.

They called him "generally speaking Yohnson" when he first arrived in Washington. This was to mock his broad Scandinavian accent. Because of it, and dirt-farmer characteristics on which he prided himself to the full extent of his booming voice, he was too easily dismissed as a buffoon. But his significance went deeper. He exemplified the American ideal of the poor boy who, through force of character and full appreciation of his opportunities, rises to a post of national significance.

Magnus Johnson's accomplishments were slight. Indeed, his inability to translate his then radical ideas into legislative realities disappointed his farmer constituents so sorely that they deserted him at his bid for re-election. Still, he had made his mark—he had become a Senator. The American democracy offers that opportunity. It cannot, however, guarantee the nicely balanced intelligence that should accompany such attainment.

The True Liberators.

At Cambridge 72 of the world's leading scientists and scholars, gathered to do honor to Harvard on its tercentenary have been seeking to analyze the grievous disorders of the world. Each a specialist of great renown in his own field, they have by the very act of meeting together emphasized the unity and indivisibility of truth.

This has been a heartening spectacle. In many countries that search for truth which knows no barriers of race or nation, of class or creed, of politics or party, has been cribbed, cabined and confined upon orders from those in authority. All too frequently have the beneficent fruits of scholarship been diverted to evil ends. Over large areas where once science and learning were free they are now in chains. They have become handmaidens of war, abject tools of the all-devouring state which recognizes no purpose other than national aggrandizement and no truth that does not contribute to the achievement of that end.

Out of this Harvard gathering there has come a fine suggestion. It is that the meeting of savants should somehow be organized into a permanent body, a "supreme court of learning." The purpose would be not merely another agency to exchange information and ideas regarding advances in science and scholarship but rather to defend the objective and courageous search of truth against its enemies; to keep alight the torch of learning in a world rapidly plunging into darkness.

Just how this plan is to be put into execution is not clear. But it is important that the intellectual leaders of mankind have begun to realize that they must band together to protect science and scholarship against its increasingly numerous and increasingly powerful enemies; to see that the world is not completely engulfed by that wave of neo-barbarism that has already swept over more than one nation.

During recent years men of intellect have impotently watched the rise to power of men of brute mind. They have seen the judicial attitude mocked by those who would regiment mankind. And these thinkers and researchers have begun to realize that everything they stand for is in danger; that science and scholarship can only flourish in an atmosphere of freedom. It is no longer the Cassandras alone, but all intelligent men, who now realize that submergence of intellectual freedom is submergence of civilization itself.

The process of decay is visible on many an horizon. The "revolt of the masses" which Ortega y Gasset has so penetratingly described has hitherto found men of science too disorganized, too absorbed in their own narrow specialization, to resist. Here and there heroic voices have been raised in protest against the prostitution of truth, the regimentation of minds. But for every Pavlov, for every Planck, for every Croce, for every Cardinal Faulhaber or Hu Shih, there have been dozens, nay hundreds, who have not dared to cry out against that destruction of free inquiry without which progress is impossible.

That scholars and scientists are now manifesting signs of rebellion against this degenerating tendency is of vital significance. It is they, uniting with all others who love freedom, who must act and act quickly. For them to become willing tools of tyrants, perhaps in the vain hope that whatever happens to others, individual savants will be permitted to go on, means ultimate destruction of everything men devoted to truth must hold dear. Should the scientists, the philosophers, the scholars band together, and in so doing emphasize the universality which is the very essence of knowledge, they will serve not only themselves but the world. Once again they will show that they are, as they have so often been in the past, the true liberators of mankind.

Clarifying The Issue.

By a coincidence which was not at all unnatural Gov. Landon, at Portland, Me., and Dr. Robert Lay, head of the Nazi Labor Front, at Nuremberg, Germany, on Saturday offered their audiences almost identical descriptions of the fundamental political issue which today confronts Western civilization.

Speaking to the voters of Maine, Gov. Landon defined this issue as a choice between "the system of free competitive enterprise" and that system "under which the minutest doings of every citizen are scrutinized and regulated." Between these two systems, he said, "there is no half-way house."

Speaking to the German National Socialist Party Congress, Dr. Lay also described civilization as facing a parting of the ways, with temporizing as to the choice impossible. But to him the liberal outlook favored by Gov. Landon is a path which leads straight to "anarchy." The alternative of increasing governmental regimentation he described as Hitler's world of "order, system and discipline." This Nazi philosophy, he predicted, would eventually triumph among all peoples.

Aside from the fact that the two men stand on opposite sides of the fence, there is only one real difference between the issue as defined by both Gov. Landon and Dr. Lay. This difference lies in the fact that Germany has already made the choice between preserving individual freedom and subordinating it to a mystical glorification of the state. In the United States the decision is still pending, and it is not yet too late to turn back on that road which Germany has traveled to her present unparalleled centralization of autocratic power.

The importance of the coming Presidential election is clearly emphasized by the unconscious confirmation given by this Nazi leader to the underlying issues as voiced by Gov. Landon. In the words of the latter: "We have but to look across the waters to see the consequences of government domination over economic life."

If we look long enough, and clearly enough, it is scarcely probable that Dr. Lay's prediction of a universal triumph for the Nazi system will be fulfilled.

Subversive Forces.

Washington appears generally to have frowned on the suggestion from a major general in the Atlanta area that the Civilian Conservation Corps be militarized. It is to be hoped that the President, before whom the proposal is said to have been discussed, will take occasion to do likewise. For imposition of target and bayonet practice on CCC enrollees would be a long step toward veiled conscription. If national policy demands a larger Army the step should be taken openly and not by such surreptitious steps as Germany employed to evade peace-treaty restrictions.

The CCC camps were organized with the aim of rehabilitating unemployed youths and equipping them for constructive activity in civil life. Toward this end they have proceeded so successfully that scarcely a word of criticism is raised against them in a campaign not signalized by neglect of flaws in New Deal agencies.

The camps have sent thousands of boys to promising private jobs; they have not been allowed to succumb to political interference; they have accomplished significant improvements, as diverse as reforestation and effective mosquito control, throughout the country; they have taught some 40,000 illiterate boys to read and write. Already they afford the disciplinary advantages of semi-military organization. To introduce the manual of arms would be to endanger the civil training which is the very heart of the idea.

The militarization proposal, as an essential characteristic of the totalitarian mode of government, should be opposed by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, now assembled at Denver in their annual encampment. The organization's director of Americanization asserted in his report that the V. F. W. is "fighting communism, fascism and atheism," an activity that will be everywhere applauded. Unfortunately, however, he went on to argue for teachers' oaths, not recognizing in this device a primary weapon of fascism, dependent for its existence on the rigorous suppression of the spirit of free inquiry.

Thus the wisdom of Pope Pius' words are confirmed. Only yesterday he warned that a needed campaign against the "forces of subversion" now ravaging the world would be "both difficult and dangerous, for it is only too easy for the very ardor and difficulty of defense to go to an excess which is not wholly warranted." The American Legion, in recently repudiating earlier enthusiasm for teachers' oaths, has recognized this danger. If the V. F. W. would do similarly, the Nation would have a still higher regard for the intelligent Americanism of its veteran organizations.

A program more consistent with the V. F. W.'s resolve to defend democracy would concentrate on the zealous protection of that free speech, free press and freedom of assembly on which the American system is predicated. That they are threatened is borne out by the news, again from Atlanta, that the Communist candidate for President, arriving there for a campaign speech, was met on the station platform by detectives whose superior officer had based his orders to them on a personal conviction that "we don't like that stuff in Atlanta." Proceeding on to Florida, the candidate again was prevented from speaking because the doors to the meeting hall reserved for him had been chained and locked by unidentified persons.

Of such stuff are the "isms" made.

Amazing Maize.

From the Chicago Daily News.

It takes a year like 1934 or 1936 to bring home to Americans the extent to which our civilization is a maize civilization. Critical news today relates to the condition of the corn crop. Because so much corn "walks to town" in the form of pig, even here in the capital of the corn belt we are likely to forget the economic importance of corn.

But corn and coal are the two great sources from which are derived the organic and inorganic energies that move the muscles and the machinery which must keep in motion if America is to remain a going concern.

It is a sobering thought that this corn belt, the organic powerhouse of America, has every year a rendezvous with fate. If we get 30 inches of rain properly spaced between June 1 and September 1 we have reason to be a happy people. What would happen if we encountered a series of dry years that wiped out both crops and carry-over of corn?

Certainly drastic readjustments would have to be made because few crops grown either in the temperate or torrid zones yield so much usable energy per unit of labor as corn.

We are accustomed to think of corn as a gift of nature. But corn, in its way, is as civilized as man. So different is maize from the other grasses upon which civilizations have been based as to give rise to the suspicion that in the dim prehistory of this hemisphere some master medicine man Burbank produced it by artificial hybridization.

Reply For The South.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you allow me space in your letter column to assure Frank Putnam, whose letter appeared in The Post of September 11, that he is not offending any of his Southern friends? Southern folks are not offended; they are only disgusted.

Mr. Putnam clearly indicates, in his fear, that he seeks to lead the readers of The Post to believe that the bulk of President's Roosevelt's votes will come from the "licked, lazy and looney" of the South.

On the other hand, he submits that Mr. Landon's votes will come from real Americans, who stand on their own feet, free from dictation. How many of these "real Americans," while standing on their own feet, free from "Government dictation," had those same feet on the necks of the "licked, lazy and looney?" I was most intrigued by Mr. Putnam's assertion that the Republican Party has been taken over by the young Americans. Have William Randolph Hearst and the DuPont brothers taken the monkey gland treatment, or something?

Speaking for the South, I want to assure Mr. Putnam, from Illinois, that, while at times the truth may escape us, yet we do have horse sense enough to know the difference between 5-cent cotton and 15-cent cotton, 3-cent hogs and 10-cent hogs, 15-cent corn and dollar corn, 45-cent wheat and $1.10 wheat, 2-cent cattle and 9-cent cattle, a farm or home saved by "Government dictation" as against a farm or home sold under Hoover heartlessness for one-fifth its value. Another thing, when we deposit a few dollars in any bank now we don't have to stand on the corner all night waiting to see if a line forms at the bank door before breakfast. J. E. HERBERT.

Cowgirl Larrups Males.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well here it comes again. I mean the Ides of September. The 15th inst. to them that have missed out on the higher education. Promptly after daylight on this date, the manhood of America, from the cowboys of F street to the upstandin' hombres of the Lazy B, will dash like wolf-scared sheep to the nearest ivory coverer, at the terrible prospect of being over season 5 minutes with the sun-tossed straw.

No matter if a slice of July has been mislaid in mid-September, as is now the case, or whether they've just bargained a cut-price cow's-breakfast at a fall sale, off they scurry posthaste lest an F street mug or mugette give a sneering titter in commiseration of their awful faux pas.

Gingerly they will fork out one to ten bones to secure the correct shelter for the weak end, even if the saving would let 'em buy a few gallons for the tin pedestrian chaser they've just scraped up a first payment for.

"I'd look like a sap tooling along with the old straw, when all the other birds are unveiling fall skull crowns," lisps my Harold, with the gutless temerity of Casper Milquetoast at a ladies' "down-with-men" rally.

I'm far too polite to ask him: "What did you look like before, honey lamb."

But anyhow, September 15, and hail the stronger sex!

Debt Here And In France.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ex-Republican's naive letter on the present and prospective public debt situation under the New Deal is interesting because he disposes of it as smoothly and effortlessly as a New Deal politician standing for re-election. His argument is too full of holes to permit an attempt at blanket criticism.

He does point to the nearly double per capita debt in France as evidence of the frothy burden of New Deal taxes upon his sons, and the reason presumably why the New Deal should be permitted to run wild.

I have before me recent letters from French wartime pals, also with sons. The French language is rich in invective; never more so than when the debt, and efforts to minimize it, are under discussion. Several facts are presented for Ex-Republican's consideration because—on paper—he disposes of our lesser debt with such ridiculous ease in 35 years. France has done nothing about debt reduction in 18 years, despite blanket cut of 1½ per cent in interest rates in 1932, and contemplates little reduction in the future, seeking economy and budget balance. From that time and that cause their slow recovery has started, sans aid of any new deal, though the present Government is sometimes libelously called a new deal. This is analogous to the boost this country received from the overthrow of a host of New Deal nostrums.

France participated in the world-wide depression of the early 30s. This result was not attributed by them to Hoover. That unfortunate gentleman only got credit (from opposing spellbinders) for causing the American end of it. And, as one French friend tells me: "Mon ami, France has only to recover from the depression; America must annul by natural means both the effect of this and your New Deal."

Repudiation Of Talmadge.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post's Talmadge political postobit was so true to life as to justify speaking ill of the dead. Georgia, and without doubt the entire South appreciates the fraternal spirit of your editorial and that of the leaders of the press the country over.

Smarting under the temporary ignominy cast upon her by her Governor, Georgia like the other 47 States has her quota of illiterates and come-ons who can be led astray in times of stress. But when the leader hinted at secession and defiance of Federal Government right there they balked and desertion began. They broke ranks and the war was over.

None of his followers was more gullible than the self-deceived leader himself, who, blinded by delusion of greatness, gyrated, planed and rancoed all about, scattering thousands of money even in anti-Administration territory, cajoled by a scheming enemy who overestimated him as far as he did himself. Looking back, no man, not even Huey Long, was ever a more skillful self-advertiser. His name became a synonym for news.

For years Gov. Talmadge was an able, useful public servant. He became the victim of a grandeur-complex when elected Governor by the biggest majority ever cast in Georgia prior to the recent primary. That victory undoubtedly warped his judgment and destroyed his sense of objective and perspective. His ambition soared, knew no bounds. Another character complex was an unrelenting obstinacy, coupled with a spirit of revenge. His fall was inevitable.

Early Digest Returns.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some are unwilling to concede that the supporters of President Roosevelt have occasion for concern on account of the first week's returns of the Literary Digest poll. For the early returns were from the old-stock Americans. But wait until the other extreme of our voter groups swings into action—a group, many of which were born abroad, and such a foreign-born element's children.

This group's favorite reading is the sports section of the daily papers and pamphlets denouncing the American system of government as well as those who through intelligently directed effort have honestly succeeded in business. To many of this group, America's institutions are anathema and they contend that "might makes right." To them, a constitution is a physical element that enables a fellow to win a wrestling match, a marathon race, or drink a large amount of very potent liquor and still be able to walk and talk. But this group votes and in many of our larger cities it is being shown that it has been voting "early and often."

The President's Green Pastures Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt at the "green pastures" rally at Charlotte, quoting from the beautiful words of the Twenty-third Psalm—"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters"—used such as a text to glorify the abundant life he thinks we are approaching as the result of his policies. Like in his somewhat similar address at Charleston a few months back, the idea of "we planned it that way" was emphasized, without any credit being given to God, to the perseverance of business, industry and agriculture, or to the Supreme Court, for such recovery as has occurred.

He delicately refrained from quoting the first line of the Psalm—"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." That might have suggested to some persons that like certain of the dictators of ancient Rome, and like Lenin in Russia and Hitler in Germany, he expected a kind of personal worship of himself. Moreover, he knows that after spending as a political shepherd some $13,000,000,000, some 5,000,000 Americans still want real jobs that will support themselves and families in comfort—not just work on relief projects, many of them of a silly or useless nature.

He did not quote the line—"He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me into the paths of righteousness," etc. That, of course, might have suggested the query if he had not really sullied the American soul and led away from strict righteousness by doing the exact opposite of his solemn pledges in 1932 to reduce the expenses of government 25 per cent, and to cut down the number of bureaucrats tax fed by the people. He has done much by his own intemperate language at various times, to evoke unrighteous envy, ill-will and malice, and to stir up class discord in a country which never seriously knew such before.

The President wisely refrained from the obvious untruth that the people "fear no evil." They do fear national bankruptcy from his unbalanced budget, hugely expanding national debt that by extravagance and waste is already the most colossal in all history. They fear not only increasing taxes and rapidly rising cost of living, but that if re-elected he will "pack" the Supreme Court with inferior lawyers and radicals who will rubber stamp as constitutional any crackpot measures which he orders Congress to pass, destroy State rights, etc.

He discreetly left unmentioned any reference to "Thy rod and thy staff—they comfort me." That would not contrast well with previous expressions about "birch rods," etc., or his use of the rod for hooking fish—and figuratively of hooking votes.

He indicated he wanted return of the NRA, but curiously enough most of such national recovery as he now likens to return to the "green pastures" has occurred since May 31 of last year, when exuding gloom over the unanimous decision of the Supreme Court, wringing the neck of the Blue Eagle, he predicted 5-cent cotton, other nose dives of prices, and return to the "horse and buggy days." The Post Impressionist

"Only a Quarter for Five!"

Post Offices, Tuesday.

PERHAPS this columnist remarked the phenomenon merely because he has a prejudice in favor of disorganized charity. Nevertheless, it must be a fact that Washington possesses more than a common quota of street pencil-vendors.

During a morning's rush down Pennsylvania avenue between Eighteenth street and his desk—again, during a walk which circled the Capitol and skirted its legislative office buildings—he has counted street pencil-sellers to the number of the scents that Coleridge found in the City of Cologne. Moreover, the Post-Impressionist has now discovered that these curb-market operators have a code of their own—and that, whether you know them or not, they know all that they need to know about you.

It was one of the clearest and hottest afternoons of last week when this information was gleaned. The vendor who supplied it shuffled along F street on twisted legs. Suspended from a strap around his neck hung the tray that held his merchandise. He said, as the Post-Impressionist made a purchase:

"I knew you'd be a sale, boss."

Why?

"Well, this ain't my real route; I'm pinch hittin' for a friend. But we all get to know the way people that buy look. And, besides, the fellow whose route this is, he was showin' me over it yesterday, pointin' out his regulars for me—and you was one."

* * *

It seemed to your columnist that, if he was thus favorably known to the craft, he might as well acquire some knowledge of it. Nor, after the first few, were questions necessary. This vendor wanted to talk.

* * *

"It ain't a good afternoon for business, anyhow," he declared. Too hot. If it'd cloud up or cool down, business'd be better. Seasonable weather's never good weather. People buy from us when they're feelin' their best, and they feel that way on warm days in winter and cool days in summer. Why, yesterday I worked Connecticut Avenue from Dupont Circle to the Avenue all afternoon without making but one sale. I'd 'a' quit at 5 o'clock, only I didn't have the price of a bed. All I had was the price of a coffee."

What sorts of people were his most likely customers

"All sorts. But mostly men and kids—not many women. And the men are mostly business men. Politicians are fine, though.

"My best friend works the Senate steps down to the Capitol, and that's one of the best routes in town. Senators are better buyers than Congressmen. My friend knows lots of the Senators by name. He's as good as a guide, and if you stand along side him, you'll get a chance to talk to some of them, as like as not. Often they stop and pass the time of day wtih him. My friend sells Vice President Garner. And the Vice President always hands out a half-dollar and never takes any change.

"Boss, you'll hear a lot about people in this business bein' fakes. Well, lemme tell you somethin'. I wouldn't lie to you, because there wouldn't be any use. If there was anythin' to hide, like, all I'd do 'd be to keep my trap shut. But there ain't.

"I been at it, right here in Washington, ever since my stroke—and that was in '20. Bein' so long in one place, naturally I know the men that are in the same line—up and down, drunk and sober, on duty and off. And I tell you fair and square there ain't a fake in the whole crowd.

"If they say they're blind, why, they're blind. If they say they're crippled, they're crippled. Every last one of 'em needs the dough. Every last one of 'em hates goin' to a institution. Most of 'em has people dependent on 'em. And there's not one of 'em but sells good goods at not a cent more'n a fair profit . . .

"Then there's another thing, boss. Folks'll tell you we're organized.

"Well, where'd be the harm if we was? Ain't the coal-miners? Ain't the railroad-men? And ain't the mine-owners and the railroad companies?

"But we ain't—not what you'd call really. I wish we was, and mebbe sometime we will be—only not in your day or mine; we're too individualistic yet. All we've got now 's some what you call general understandings.

"We don't thy to compete among ourselves. For instance, we don't have price-wars—once every three months we set a standard, and then we stick to it. And, for instance, nobody horns in on my route, and I don't horn in on anybody's—and a route belongs to the one that discovers it.

"You can't rightly call that organization, can you?

* * *

"Excuse me, boss. There comes another of this route's regulars, and I want to make a good turn-over for the fellow I'm pinch-hittin' for."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Uncle Tom Comes Home.

Neddie Hutton, the financier, sometimes known as old Uncle Tom Hutton, the tax slave, comes back from Europe resigned to life under the lash of Simon Legree Roosevelt after looking over conditions in the Old World. That is what I thought, too, when I returned last spring, and I think Mr. Hearst will bring back the same sentiment when he comes home, even though Mr. Hearst has been arching his neck and tossing his mane at fascism for the last year.

It doesn't take long for an American tax slave to discover that the antidote to Bolshevism is just as bad as the disease itself and that a monkey is as good as a man under Mussolini and Hitler, the same as in Russia.

Our taxes may be confiscatory, as Mr. Hutton sincerely believes, but the dictators of both kinds—Fascist and Communist—confiscate not only a man's money and property but his manhood and freedom as well. And if a fellow can hate Roosevelt for nibbling away at the edges of his fortune what would be the torture of his soul if he suddenly found a lot of arrogant ward leaders telling him to shower down with special donations, running his business for him and threatening to toss him into Alcatraz for the rest of his life if he let out so much as a plaintive peep?

Courts—hell! There aren't any courts in Italy or Germany now except secret meetings, where some lazy political phony gets up and says, "The prisoner refused to cooperate," and the judge says, "Oh, yeah? Well, file him away in a concentration camp and grab everything he's got—house, factory, jewelry, dough—everything the dirty traitor owns. Bring in the next traitor."

* * * *

It is easy to agree with Uncle Tom Hutton that Roosevelt has tossed away money in his first term not only for sedative purposes but to re-elect himself. The number of useless, shiftless nonentities and incompetents who have been placed in mock jobs as guests of the Government on the de luxe dole at wages from $3,000 to $10,000 a year exceeds the imagination of the most indignant economic royalist in the land.

Jim Farley's first appointment after Herbert Hoover slipped the baton into Roosevelt's eager hand and hot-footed it to the railroad station for the first train out of Washington was that of a personal backslapper to keep his scrapbook at $5,000 a year. With that appointment he honored the "A" for the Administration in the matter of rewarding deserving Democrats, and the boys and girls came a-running from all directions to get theirs.

The other day Turner Catledge, of the New York Times, had a piece which I believe was exclusive, announcing that after election Mr. Roosevelt is going to reorganize the Government, consolidate bureaus and all such as that—object, efficiency and economy.

We heard that before—in 1932—but maybe the boss does mean it now; because he is very mulish about his pet ideas, and once he is re-elected he doesn't have to care about the squawks of the faithful parasites of the Democratic organization, because he knows he can't grab the brass ring for a third ride. He can dust them off by the thousand, because he personally will be all washed up after the second term and the country will either bounce toward a new Republican Party or go still more bolo in 1940.

As Knute Rockne used to say, a football has a funny shape and takes funny hops, and the electorate has the same characteristics. Yet if the boss does go in for a ruthless slaughter of the ticks the next time around the natives will bleed and scream, but tax slaves like Uncle Tom Hutton and the people themselves, receiving the benefit of more efficient government plus other reforms, might consider another Democrat and four years more of the same. A football has a funny shape.

* * * *

It is my impression that Uncle Tom Hutton has been a pretty good loser. In the boom years, when people were all more or less dizzy, he was a leader in the Palm Beach set and one of those society husbands who had to dress up like ham actors in a costume play, all stuck up with false mustaches, masquerade armor and ostrich feathers and yell, "What ho, and avaunt, ye varlets!" at the Palm Beach costume ball. They felt like damn fools and looked the part, but the ladies—God love 'em—liked it, so what could the husbands do?

But when the panic cracked down Uncle Tom Hutton quit all the foolishness and ran a free restaurant for busted guys in New York, gave away a lot of money and did his best to help.

Later he decided to campaign against Roosevelt but decided that every time a rich man let out a holler against high taxes that made 10,000 votes for Mr. Big.

Now he says that in spite of the taxes, Roosevelt and all, he is going to stick around, by contrast with the Greenwich (Conn.) broker who announced that if Roosevelt was elected he was going to bail out and go to Canada.

Welcome home, Uncle Tom, and may you always find plenty of sidemeat in the cabin.

Wife Slays Husband Who 'Told All' in Sleep

Los Angeles, Sept. 14 (AP).—A story of a 37-year-old wife who killed her husband after "he constantly talked in his sleep and told of alleged intimacies with a young stenographer was pieced together tonight by police investigators.

Capt. Blaine Steed said Mrs. Georgia Haugaard told detectives she and her husband had a quarrel and he admitted his unfaithfulness and tried to kill her before she shot him. The husband, H. E. Haugaard, was found on a couch during the morning, apparently fatally wounded while sleeping.

Britain Does Nothing

Mild Support For Non-Intervention Pact Summarizes England's Reaction To Spanish Unrest; Voters Reported Apathetic.

By David Wills.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

ENGLAND'S contribution to the Spanish affair, up to the present, has been to give tepid support to the policy of so-called non-intervention. Every other implicated nation in Europe has now professed sympathy with this idea, but munitions continue to flow to the rebels from Germany and from Italy through Portuguese territory. Some arms may be going to the government from France, but this is doubtful, since the French are doing everything humanly possible to make non-intervention effective, since the alternative may be a European war.

A committee of control is suggested to see that supplies do not reach the warring forces; and once again the nations agree—on condition. The Portuguese say they must be permitted not to call it intervention if they oppose a Communist government in Spain; in other words they will join the committee so long as they can continue to support their rebel friends. The Germans and the Italians have their qualifications, and the rebels get their supplies. That this active support may prove the decisive factor in the Spanish civil war may be seen from the fall of Irun to the rebels, who had the munitions necessary to annihilate the government supporters. Despite the object lesson of women, old men, children and all their possessions being destroyed by foreign guns, the first meeting of the committee is still in the vague future.

It seems to be agreed that to describe the Spanish struggle in orign as communism against fascism is too superficial. On the government side are Republicans, Liberals, Socialists, Catholics and Universalists, as well as Communists and Syndicalists. On the rebel side are Monarchists, supporters of the Carlist pretender, Fascist, Militarists and Republicans.

The struggle is between the ruling and land-owning classes of the past and those who in the past were governed and who secured the first steps toward democratic government at the time of the formation of the republic. Spain was on the move, away from the conditions which made her and still make Portugal, one of the most illiterate and backward countries of Europe. After a three-year interlude of gradual slipping back toward reactionary control, the progressive parties gained control again earlier this year, and the miscellaneous ousted interests chose force to retain their vanishing privileges.

One may surmise that if the parties here left to fight it out between themselves, the government forces would soon prevail against the rebels. Whether that be correct or not, as a localized struggle it might not have been critical for the fate of Europe. But localized it cannot be. The rebels were assisted by the Italians before they opened the attack, and the Italians and Germans are seizing the opportunity to advance their aims by their own methods.

Italians Seek Only To Aid Fascism's Spread.

THOSE AIMS are to secure the victory of the Fascist system over the Communist, and to secure the imperial expansion of the Italian regime. Any method is justified by the ends, according to the Fascist philosophy, and if it will hamstring the democratic opposition to agree to nonintervention, then agree by all means, but don't let your agreement be more than skin deep. And as the Communists see their friends in Spain being defeated in the name of nonintervention, they are encouraged to intervene also.

Europe has taken one more step toward resolving all petty differences into the one main struggle between the extremes. To the democratic Englishman these alternatives may seem more alike than different, but by their forceful action they show up the weakness of his own democracy in supporting its own faith; he begins to be doubtful of the virtues of his own system. Fatalism is beginning to spread over Europe; the stage is prepared for a Greek tragedy, the dreadful end of which is apparent from the beginning.

The Italians may be the more active in supporting the Spanish rebels, but the Germans are far more active in trying to convert England by every possible means to friendliness to the Nazis, enmity with Russia. The extent of the Nazi espionage system was disclosed by papers seized in Madrid; a similar system is at work in England.

Herr von Ribbentrop, the new ambassador here, is to do his best to persuade England, while Hitler tries threats of force. Mr. Lloyd George is being conducted around Germany by a prominent pro-Nazi in an effort to convince him that a country which can make such excellent roads, so many agricultural experiments must be a fine country.

It is suggested to us that Germany is now ready for arms limitation; but that if we continue our rearmament further we shall prejudice the issue and start an arms race. It is explained that Germany is not afraid of Russia in isolation, but merely of the Franco-Russian alliance, and that if France will isolate herself she will contribute to Europe's peace. The British visitor to Germany is assured on every possible occasion that Germany has no evil intentions against him, is arming to defeat communism.

Sympathy For Germany In England Is Reported.

THERE is sympathy for this attitude in a certain section of our government which, although by no means in a majority, seems to be sufficiently strong to prevent any active step which might possibly be interpreted by the Germans as anti-German. But although this section has made up its mind, the English public has not. It still has to settle a number of issues: whether England is necessarily bound up with continental affairs; whether, if she cannot isolate herself, she must accept the division between fascism and communism as the only division and, if so, on which side she belongs; and if she believe in an alternative democratic solution, without choosing extremes, just what that solution is and what she proposes to do about it.

For the moment we act as if isolation were our aim, although there are probably few people who really believe that England could keep out of another European war. The only positive policy we have is re-armament. In contrast to the deliberate, audacious, unscrupulous pursuit of their ends by the dictatorships, the British democracy is seen muttering ineffective platitudes about humanitarian warfare, non-intervention between the "rival Spanish factions," as Sir Samuel Hoare described them as he depressed the Spanish government to the level of the rebels and blessed the use of armed force to reverse an electoral decision.

The British are uneasy over this apparent weakness of their system when faced with the need for action, but they still don't know what to do about it. The suggestion that the left parties must form a Popular Front to secure control of the government, to influence the present government while it is in office by the overwhelming weight of organized popular opinion, has not made much headway among the public and has gained nothing but condemnation from the official Labor Party.

Isolationists And Nazi Enthusiasts Seen In Control.

THUS AMONG our political leaders, the active parties are those trying to isolate us from Europe, or to convert us to the Nazi philosophy. Those who wish to support democratic principles are on the defensive; partly, of course, because they were defeated in their previous attempt to get England to support the democratic League of Nations against the last example of Italian aggression.

Symbol of the position may be found in the complete seclusion adopted by Prime Minister Baldwin, who after all is a democrat and no authoritarian, but who feels that the fates have been too unkind in putting us in our present position. He hopes that if he looks in the opposite direction, keeps his mouth shut, the crisis may pass. David Low, our greatest political cartoonist, has been drawing Baldwin with sticking plaster across his mouth, labeled Old Sealed Lips; now Low shows Baldwin encased in wrappings like a mummy, christens him Baldwin Now Completely Sealed.

The effect of all this upon the electorate in Britain is not to urge greater interest in politics, but to discredit the parliamentary system. A growing number of voters feel that it is useless to vote for a Conservative who sympathizes with fascism, for a Labor man who refuses to co-operate with the allies necessary if he is ever to form a government, for a Liberal who doesn't count anyhow. So the voter may complete the breakdown of Parliamentary democracy by refusing to vote.

Secret Papers Reveal Foreign Policies of U. S.

State Department Documents Give Details of 1921 Activities.

By the United Press.

Intimate details of the United States' struggle to build a strong foreign policy from the wreckage of President Woodrow Wilson's scuttled League of Nations' program were disclosed yesterday in hitherto unpublished State Department correspondence of 1921.

During that year, the papers showed, this Nation was engaged in a triple-edged maneuver:

Use of its great influence to turn the world away from a course of militarism and back into the paths of peace and diplomacy through the promotion of the Washington Arms Conference.

Preservation of the "open-door" policy in China and peaceful settlement of other vexing problems.

Formation of a Pan-American policy which had as one of its objectives solution of the Tacna-Arica controversy threatening war between Chile and Peru.

Meanwhile, this Government was co-operating with other powers and often taking the initiative in measures designed to prevent the financial collapse of China.

Hughes Shrewd Diplomat.

The correspondence revealed Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State, as a shrewd and cautious diplomat who often couched his refusal of international proposals in language that strayed from diplomatic suavity to the point of sheer bluntness.

This was the case in July, 1921, when, after invitations had been sent out to world powers to attend the Washington Arms Conference, Great Britain suggested a preliminary meeting to be attended by Premier Lloyd George of England, Canadian Premier Arthur Meighen, Lord Curzon, secretary of state of Great Britain; W. M. Hughes, Australian prime minister and attorney general, and representatives from the United States and Japan.

It was proposed that the British statesmen sail for Bar Harbor, Me., on a fast warship, remain a week and dash back to England.

Hughes rejected the plan promptly and vigorously. In a lengthy reply to Harvey, the State Department head emphasized that countries omitted from such a conference rightfully could interpret the act as a discourtesy and then added:

"* * * I do not see that it will be possible to alter the effect by merely changing the place of the conference from Washington to Bar Harbor."

Defense of the "open door" policy in China and other Chinese problems occupied much of Hughes' time, the papers showed.

Efforts to Save China.

Formation of an international consortium of bankers to save China from financial collapse occurred early in 1921. J. P. Morgan & Co. represented the American group. One of the problems that came before the consortium was the necessity of protecting American bankers and investors holding Chinese securities.

In this group was the Continental and Commercial Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, which, in 1916, made a three-year loan of $5,000,000 to China and in 1919 made a two-year loan of $5,500,000 to enable the Chinese government to take up the first loan and to absorb the discount on the second one. Bankers also carried a $5,500,000 loan made to China by the Pacific Development Co.

The correspondence shows that as China failed to meet even interest payments on the loans, Hughes instructed American diplomats to make strong representations to Chinese government officials.

The consortium finally advanced the Pacific Development Co. $5,000,000 on its Chinese securities. At one stage of the proceedings, the papers disclosed, Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, discussed the possibility of obtaining a loan for the Pacific Development Co. from the War Finance Corporation, with the Chinese paper as security.

Robert Nathan

By William Lyon Phelps.

His New Book.

I know of only three novelists in America who are able to give complete complex characters and a full life history in very small space; these masters of concision are Zona Gale, Thornton Wilder and Robert Nathan. Miss Gale's "Miss Lulu Bett," Mr. Wilder's "The Bridge of San Louis Rey," Mr. Nathan's "Autumn" are complete works of art, small in size, large in suggestion.

Now let me say to readers of this column that they should immediately run, not walk, to the nearest bookshop and buy a copy of "The Enchanted Voyage," by Robert Nathan. The publisher's name is Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

* * * *

From first page to last it is sheer delight. I have not read anything like it since the death of Frank Stockton. And Mr. Nathan is not like Mr. Stockton; he is not like anybody; he is original. But in humor, in tenderness, in romance, and in the genius of the unexpected, he makes me think of Frank Stockton.

Here are four characters: The hero, his wife, Mary and the dentist. This is surely the literature of escape. He escapes from his wife, who had regarded him not as an asset, but as a liability. Yet, as Mr. Young remarked in "Night Thoughts," "How blessings brighten as they take their flight!"

* * * *

What Mr. Young meant, when he wrote that line 200 years ago, is that the blessing seems to brighten in the eyes of the person who watches it recede. That is most certainly true in this novel; but what is also true, is that in this particular instance, the blessing itself brightens. The inoffensive drudge of a carpenter rises to a height of brilliance previously unknown. His wife thought she knew him, but, when you come to that, who knows anybody?

Aims of Japan In North China Called 'Dream'

Dr. Hu Shih, Professor in Nanking, Says Section Desires Unity.

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 14.—Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese philosophy professor at Peiping National University, tonight dismissed as a "wild dream" the possibility that Japan might establish an autonomous state in North China.

"Japan may have wild dreams of that kind," Dr. Hu told the United Press in an exclusive interview, "but the sense of national unity and the force of public opinion in North China and the whole country will not tolerate such a thing."

The eminent Chinese philosopher came here to read a paper on "Chinese Culture Before and After Indianization" at Harvard's Tercentenary Conference of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Hu regarded possible "restoration" of the "boy emperor," Emperor Kang Teh of Manchukuo, to his dragon throne at Peiping as "really a matter of speculation."

No Monarchy.

He was emphatic in his assertion China would not revert to a monarchy after a 25-year test of democracy.

"Absolutely impossible," he said.

Actually the situation in China has improved in recent months, according to Dr. Hu.

"Internally, it is very satisfactory," he said. "I think China is making great progress in all internal phases—transportation, communication and rural rehabilitation, and in particular, in political unity. Externally, however, the international situation hasn't shown much improvement in the last few years."

Dr. Hu denied reports that Kwangsi Province in the southwest contemplated fighting Nanking.

"Latest reports from China," he explained, "indicate that the province of Kwangsi has recognized the authority of the central government at Nanking, and has pledged its allegiance under conditions which already had been carried out by Nanking."

He declined to comment on the present political and military strength of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, strong man at Nanking.

"I don't know," he confessed. "You see I have been away."

As to reports Chiang was ill, Dr. Hu said the war lord was "in perfect health when I last saw him in July." He declined to name a possible successor to Chiang.

The theory of Lin Yu-tang that civil warfare resulted from differences in language and race of residents of different provinces was disputed by Dr. Hu.

"China is racially and culturally a unity and is developing a physical basis for real, effective unity through development of modern means of transportation and communication," he asserted.

Discussing state's rights, Dr. Hu said there were "always conflicts between a strong neutral government and the component states anywhere in the world." Kwangsi, he said, was one of the best governed provinces in China and "naturally fears too much interference from the central government at Nanking.

Honduran Troops Overwhelm Rebels

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Sept. 14 (U.P.).—Government troops under Gen. Juan B. Chavez yesterday overwhelmed a rebel army, led by three generals, near the Nicaraguan border, killing four revolutionists and taking several prisoners, it was announced officially today.

The loyalists captured a considerable quantity of war material, horses and correspondence abandoned by the rebels in their flight.

Among the prisoners taken was Gen. Juan Bautista Mendoza. Other leaders of the rebels were Gens. Manuel Samayoa and Mariano Bertrand Anduray.

The engagement was the second within a fortnight between government troops and forces seeking the overthrow of President Tiburcio Carias. Loyalist planes routed rebel bands operating along the Nicaraguan and Salvadoran borders on September 1.

Swanson Praises Aviation Machinist

Kinbrough Pritchett, naval aviation machinist, yesterday was commended by Secretary Swanson for "repeated attempts to rescue" two men from a burning plane at the Norfolk Naval Operatnig Base.

In a letter of commendation to Pritchett, stationed at Norfolk, the Secretary praised him for "meritorious conduct."

Bankers Held Fearing Government Control

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 14 (AP).—Robert W. Sparks, president of the Financial Advertisers Association, today said the secret fear of the American banker is the "usurping of his management by the Government."

Speaking before the association at its annual convention, Sparks, vice president of the Bowery Savings Bank of New York, said it is "difficult to know whether American banking is speeding on a one-way street to Government control."

Chicago Bankers at Securities Hearing

Underwood & Underwood.

Philip Clark, president of the City National Bank of Chicago, and H. M. Dawes, brother of former Vice President Charles Dawes, were present as the Securities and Exchange Commission resumed its inquiry into financial dealings of investment trusts.

SEC Records '31 Stock 'Deal' Of Dawes' Firm

Bought $800,000 of Issue at $8-$10 Higher Than Quoted, Agency Says.

By the United Press.

An investment trust company once headed by Henry M. Dawes, brother of former Vice President Charles G. ("Hell - 'n' - Maria") Dawes, purchased an $800,000 block of bank stock in 1931 at prices ranging from $8 to $10 a share above market quotations, Securities and Exchange Commission investigators charged today.

The transaction was described by David Schenker, special counsel directing the commission's inquiry into the Nation's $4,000,000,000 investment trust structure which was ordered by Congress with a view to placing these fiscal agencies under some form of Federal regulatory control.

Henry Dawes, Comptroller of Currency during the Harding regime, later an officer of the Central Illinois Securities Corporation, the Central Trust Co., and now president of the Pure Oil Corporation, was questioned yesterday.

Schenker brought out that on June 9, 1931, the Central Illinois Securities Corporation bought 20,000 shares of stock in the National Bank of the Republic at Chicago for $800,000, although the stock was quoted on the market at prices ranging from $30 to $32 a share. Between December 31, 1929, and January 21, 1931, the same corporation purchased two blocks of stock in its banking affiliate, the Central Trust Co., at a cost of $355,591.

Explains Transactions.

The tall, rangy Dawes calmly explained the transactions. He said that on small blocks of stocks "the market price is not necessarily the real value of the shares."

Likewise, he added, the purchases were made at a time when "many of us were saying that prosperity is just around the corner." The financial condition of the banking affiliate, Dawes insisted, justified the acquisition of its stock by the investment trust.

Schenker sought to show that the $800,000 transaction took place at a time when "first rumbles" of serious banking troubles had been heard. During the first six months of 1931, the attorney continued, 14 banks in the vicinity of Chicago had closed their doors and large withdrawals from other banks had begun.

Cites "Hysteria" in Air.

Dawes insisted he believed the uneasiness was due to a "feeling of hysteria prevailing at that time."

"I was foolish enough to believe then that the hysteria was only temporary," Dawes said.

Later the Central Trust, of Illinois, and the National Bank of the Republic were merged. Dawes said the merger had solidified the structure of both banks. He was interrogated about the $90,000,000 RFC loan to the Central Trust Co., made three weeks after former Vice President Dawes had resigned as chairman of the fiscal agency. The witness said he was not familiar with all details of the loan.

Seattle Staff Warned Against Guild, 2 Testify

Seattle, Sept. 14 (AP).—Two former members of the strike-bound Post-Intelligencer's home economics department testified at a National Labor Relations Board hearing today that the staff was warned membership in the American Newspaper Guild presented "an excellent opportunity for martyrdom."

The hearing is on the guild's complaint that the Post-Intelligencer discharged Phographer Frank M. Lynch and Drama Critic Everhardt Armstrong for guild activity. The paper was forced to cancel publication August 13 by a newsroom strike protesting the paper's refusal to reinstate the men whose discharge it claims was for cause.

Reward Offer Boosted In Detroit Kidnaping

Detroit, Sept. 14 (AP).—Reward offers were boosted today to a total of $1,150 as the ninth day passed without finding missing 20-months-old Harry Browe and Detective Chief Henry Piel expressed the belief the child has been taken out of the city.

Aided by Federal agents, police renewed efforts to trace a card received Saturday by the baby's mother, Mrs. Robert Browe, who was told by the writer that the baby was taken by a childless couple and was in good health.

Hamilton Maps 'Precinct' Fight Of Republicans

C. O. P. Chief Meets Party Aids in Chicago, Urges Concerted Battle.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Plans for organization "down to the last precinct" were drafted today by Republican National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton and 250 party leaders from 27 Central and Western States.

Hamilton told the conferees to call State meetings to arrange programs designed to attain that objective.

"This is the last time we will all be together before the election," the chairman asserted. "There are three things we must accomplish. First, registration of voters in States where registration is not complete. Second, dissemination of literature provided by the national headquarters. Third, 10 to 12 hours of vital work on election day."

"The cornerstone of practical politics is work and more of it," he said. "I never knew the time when a group of volunteer political workers couldn't make a bunch of paid workers look like chumps."

Participating in the conference at a Loop hotel were national committeemen and committeewomen. State chairmen and women vice chairmen, Young Republican State officials, secretaries of State central committees, officers of Landon-Knox clubs and 40 State representatives of the Republican Service Men's League.

Harrison E. Spangler, executive assistant to Hamilton, presided over an earlier session of national committeemen and chairmen and secretaries of State central committees. He said co-ordination of the activities of State and national organizations was the topic of discussions there.

J. Kenneth Bradley, a State Senator from Connecticut and national leader of the young Republicans, held a separate parley with chairmen of his organizaiton from 26 States.

Mrs. Grace Reynolds, Western director of the women's division of the national committee, also met with national committeewomen and women vice chairmen of State committees before all groups went into a joint meeting.

Power, Labor Issues Before Supreme Court

Other New Deal Laws Face Tests at Session Opening in October.

By Robert C. Albright.

With PWA power policies already slated for review, and five other appeals from New Deal laws awaiting consideration, United States Supreme Court attaches are assembling a fall docket second only in dramatic possibilities to the sweeping review of the Administration program which featured the last court session.

The high court will convene October 5, coincident with the closing month of the Presidential campaign. Issues figuring prominently in the campaign may be argued, although it appears unlikely any significant decision will be handed down before the November elections.

Already set for early consideration is a suit challenging the legitimacy of Administration moves to force lower electric rates through construction of municipal power plants to compete with private concerns. Constitutionality of the PWA program in general, and PWA power loans in particular, are at stake.

As the docket stands now, litigation involving five other regulatory laws have been submitted for review, although not yet scheduled definitely for consideration. They involved constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium act, the public utilities holding company law, the National Labor Relations Board act, the national railway labor statute and the securities act of 1935.

Another host of New Deal test cases are advancing through the lower courts and may reach the highest court before the conclusion of its term. They include another challenge of TVA "yardstick" operations in Tennessee Valley cities.

A second petition challenging the validity of the Wagner labor relations act was filed with the court yesterday by the Associated Press, appealing from an order by the National Labor Relations Board directing it to reinstate Morris Watson, discharged employe in its New York office.

"The first amendment guarantees to citizens of the United States freedom of speech and freedom of the press," the Associated Press petition contended. "This freedom is seriously jeopardized by the labor relations act.

"If the validity of the act is upheld the board will be able to force the Associated Press to employ men, even though it feels such men write accurate and impartial reports, and the Associated Press, if it is to continue in business will have to send these reports out as its own.

"Its freedom to present the news it wants to will be seriously hampered if not destroyed."

Another test of the act previously had been asked by the Bradley Lumber Co., of Arkansas. The lumber company complained the board had no jurisdiction over its arrangements with employes engaged solely in intra-State activities.

Headlining the court term will be oral arguments on the PWA power suit brought by the Duke Power Co. and the Southern Public Utilities Co. against the PWA and officials of Greenwood County, S. C., where a PWA-financed municipal power plant is proposed.

Counsel for the Alabama Power Co. and the Texas Utilities Co. have asked that a similar suit of their own be argued at the same time. The latter case involved use of PWA and relief funds for city-owned electric systems in Plainview, Tex., and Florence, Sheffield, Tuscumbia, Decatur, Hartselle, Guntersville and Russellville, Ala.

The Duke Power Co.'s case pivots on an allocation of $2,582,000 by the PWA to Greenwood County in 1933 for construction of a municipal power plant. In 1935 the Duke Power Co., in a South Carolina Federal court, succeeded in enjoining local officials from duplicating existing private facilities. When the circuit court of appeals reversed the district court findings, the power company carried the case to the Supreme Court.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the cabinet of President Wilson, heads an array of prominent counsel representing the utilities. Baker has raised the question of whether a purely local plant serves any National purpose that would justify Federal expenditure of funds, and whether private plants would be duplicated in such a way as to coerce privately owned electric utilities into making reductions in their intra-State rates.

PWA officials concede that an unfavorable decision from the Supreme Court in the Duke Power Co. case would work havoc with the PWA program. Infiltration of municipal power plants is said to have been planned in every State except Wyoming and New Mexico.

Black Legion Talk Admitted by Czarist

Detroit, Sept. 14 (AP).—A "White Russian" who admitted addressing the Black Legion meeting May 12 at which the State charges members of the hooded band "sentenced" Charles A. Poole to death, testified today he saw four men leave the hall with orders to abduct Poole.

The witness, one of the 52 the State has called in the trial of 12 men charged with shooting Poole to death, was Victor N. Schultze, an admitted member of the Black Legion. He said he was a Czarist Russian, and that he had delivered a talk against communism at the meeting.

Schultze said "Col." Harvey Davis made an inflammatory speech in which he accused Poole, a nonmember, of wife beating, and that Davis sent Dayton Dean, Edgar Baldwin, Paul R. Edwards and Urban Lipps out with orders to bring Poole back. He said he understood Poole was only to be given a flogging.

5 States Ballot Today; Large Vote Expected

Nominations for National and Local Offices Set; Comebacks Sought.

By the Associated Press.

Nominations to national and State office will be made in five States today as the Nation watches returns from the Maine elections.

The names before the voters include some made familiar by years of controversy, Curley in Massachusetts, Couzens in Michigan, Moses in New Hampshire and others.

From several States came predictions of unusually large turnouts, such as was encouraged by the crisp, fall day in Maine yesterday.

Principal points of primaries today:

Massachusetts—Gov. Curley opposed for Democratic Senatorial nomination by Robert E. Greenwood, Mayor of Fitchburg and son-in-law of Senator Coolidge. Republican State convention indorsed Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., for Senate nomination.

Michigan—Senator Couzens, on record for Roosevelt re-election, seeking Republican renomination against former Gov. Brucker, Frank Murphy, Philippine commissioner, and George W. Welsh, former Republican lieutenant governor, seeking Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

New Hampshire—Former Senator Moses attempting a comeback against Gov. Bridges for Republican senatorial nomination. Former President Hoover indorsed Moses yesterday.

Wisconsin—Gov. Philip LaFollette unopposed for Progressive renomination; Townsend indorsement given nine candidates for nomination to national House, and six backed by the National Union for Social Justice.

Capital Holdup Nets Robber $20

Freeman Hudgins, 34, of 3535 Fourteenth street northwest, was robbed of $20 early yesterday by a man who accosted him on the street and dragged him into an alley near Ninth and G streets northwest.

Hudgins told police the man overpowered him, searched his pockets and then fled.

Rome Fair Places Ethiopia on View

Rome, Sept. 14 (AP).—Ethiopia, the country, today was on display in the seventh fair of the Levantine.

The fair, opened over the weekend, contains an extensive Ethiopian pavilion, among other major exhibits.

It is Italy's first effort to show the world in more than words and photographs that she got something worth fighting for and not merely another addition to what Premier Mussolini once called Italy's "collection of deserts."

Built by the Fascist Confederation of Agriculture, the Ethiopian pavilion displays many products of Ethiopia.

FACT vs. FALLACY

CORRECTING SOME FALSE IMPRESSIONS ABOUT MODERN NEWSPAPER CARRIER-SALESMEN!

EVEN in these enlightened days, some people still picture a newspaper carrier-salesman as a ragged young street ruffian, or a pathetic little urchin—dirty, shabby, homeless and hungry, begging business, getting into mischief, and almost certain to end up as an idler, wastrel or criminal.

Nothing could be more unfair or untrue! Compaire this misconception with the genial, capable carrier boy who delivers this newspaper to your home each day, and you'll at once realize it's all wrong. The typical newspaper boy of today is no whining waif, but a sturdy, smart lad who is proud of his work and eager to get ahead.

As a result of his newspaper experience, he develops character, ability and ambition; thus, is equipped for greater success in life than the average boy will achieve.

The lives of many prominent citizens prove that there is no better way for an enterprising lad to begin a successful career than by serving as a carrier-salesman for this newspaper. Among carrier-boys of today are leaders of tomorrow.

Marvin Urges Rule by Reason On G. W. Faculty

Shun Emotional Elements Befogging World, He Tells 400 Teachers.

Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, told members of the faculty at their first meeting of the academic year last night to ignore emotional elements that befog the world today and "think things through together."

"If we can maintain a leadership of reason in this country," he said, "we need not fear the encroachment of any order such as the communism or fascism we see operating in Europe and elsewhere."

At the same time he sounded this warning:

"We must constantly have in mind that fascism and communism are common foes of a democratic society, and we should be equally unsympathetic with either."

Stresses Need for Reason.

Emphasizing the need for reason rather than emotion in considering world problems, Marvin continued:

"Never has there been a time in the history of the world when leaders have so used the emotions of men against the development of mankind. Where this is true there is no freedom, for freedom can be had only under a government of reason.

"As citizens under the Constitution we have status, and this status insures a free and unshackeled mind. There is no reason why we cannot lay aside the emotional elements that are so befogging the world today and think things through together. If we will do this many of the apparent difficulties will vanish. The opportunities before us are great, for in this day the whole sphere of social action is pregnant with new outlooks.

"If you, and your colleagues in more than 1,500 colleges and universities in this country, will demand and teach your students to demand reasonable explanations of what is going on in the world today, you can readily develop a following among men who are being tried by the emotional fires of fear and hope.

Makes Plea for Reality.

"Men are afraid of the theoretical schoolman, but they will welcome your leadership if it be based on reality and reason. Examine your problems under the clear light of intellectuality and do not let any question concerned with our political, economic or social life be approached by means of wishful thinking. Demand that we meet the actual conditions as they exist. If a sufficient number make this demand, we can keep our form of democratic government and develop a maximum of freedom for the individual."

Marvin discussed the advantages and responsibilities of George Washington University over other schools because of its size, the fact that it is independent and privately endowed, and because of its location in the Nation's Capital.

Registration of students for the 116th academic year will be started Saturday, continuing Monday and Tuesday. Classes will be started a week from tomorrow.

Geoghan's Fate Rests With Lehman; Trial Over

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP).—The fate of William F. X. Geoghan as Kings County prosecutor rested tonight with Gov. Lehman after seven hours' summation by counsel who for 14 days prosecuted and defended charges he was negligent and incompetent in handling Brooklyn's now famous drunken murder case.

Red Men Hear Ideals Praised By President

Cummings Reads Message; Order Pays Tribute to Deceased Members.

After hearing a message from President Roosevelt, delivered by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, at their opening session yesterday morning, delegates to the eighty-seventh annual convention of the Great Council of the Improved Order of Red Men met last night at the Willard Hotel to pay tribute to deceased members of their order.

At the "Council of Great Sorrow" last night delegates heard speeches by Charles E. Pass and Harry Cuthriell, and the memorial address delivered by Edward O. Connor.

Today the delegates will hold sessions of the Great Council of the United States and of the Past Great Pocahontas League. Tonight they will gather at their annual ball to hear a message from Assistant Attorney General Brien McMahon, who was appointed by President Roosevelt to head the criminal division of the Attorney General's office.

The President, in his message, recalled that he was a member of the organization, one of the oldest fraternal organizations in the country, and lauded its "ideal of freedom, friendship and charity."

Also on yesterday morning's session was an address by District Commissioner Allen, who welcomed the delegates to Washington. Arthur J. Ruhland, great incohonee, delivered the response.

The convention, which will last through Friday, was informally opened Sunday night with a reception at the Willard, headquarters for the meeting.

Tomorrow night the delegates will hold their annual dance and Friday they will hold their final sessions. About 1,000 members are attending

Al Smith Tosses Jibe At New Deal at Feast

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, an unlisted speaker, injected a political note into a dinner here tonight for foreign delegates to the Third World Power Conference at Washington when he was called upon for an address.

Recalling that Viscount Falmouth, of Great Britain, remarked to him at the dinner that he had spent "a couple of interesting days at Washington," the former Governor remarked:

"He has nothing on us. The only difference is we've had a couple of years of it, and if he sticks around a couple of weeks more he'll hear more about it that he ever thought existed."

Chicagoan Talks To Church Group

A lecture on "Christian Science Brings Enlightenment for Mankind" was given last night in Fourth Church of Christ, Scientist, by Miss Margaret Morrison, of Chicago. Miss Morrison is a member of the Scientist Board of Lectureship.

The lecturer said in part:

"Speaking of the impossibility of existence outside of or beyond Omnipresence, the Psalmist said: 'Wither shall I go from Thy spirit? Or whither shall I fleet from Thy presence. If I ascend up into heaven, Thou are there; if I make by bed in hell, behold, Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me and Thy right hand shall hold me.'

"Dwelling thus in the omnipresence of Spirit, we see that no matter what the husman surroundings may seem to be, whether, seemingly, they partake of the nature of heaven or hell, man's true environment is Mind, the sanctuary of Spirit, with all its grace, strength, health and loveliness. Nothing sordid, meager or unlovely can be a part of that environment. It is possible through right thinking, as taught in Christain Science, completely to change one's environment."

District's Heads Begin to Slash 1938 Estimates

$58,000,000 Budget to Be Cut to $40,000,000 Under Plan.

The District Commissioners conferred all day yesterday with department heads as they began the task of slashing the $58,000,000 estimates for 1938.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan said it will require about four days to complete the job, after which the Commissioners will prepare the budget draft, together with supplemental estimates, for submission to the Budget Bureau.

Under the plan agreed upon the District heads will cut the primary budget to operating costs in the neighborhood of $40,000,000. They will then select the more worthy of the Capital improvement projects and additional personnel requests and incorporate them in supplemental estimates.

The latter will be held in reserve to be submitted only after the President has reported to Congress on the results of the fiscal relations study now under way.

It is believed that even the supplemental estimates will be far below the requests of the department heads, as none of the Commissioners are optimistic enough to expect the Federal contribution to make up the $18,000,000 difference between the $40,000,000 anticipated revenue for the next fiscal year and the $58,000,000 estimates.

Meanwhile, the department heads are gathering data requested last week by J. L. Jacobs, director of the fiscal relations survey, on the estimated cost of the seat of the national government to the District in extra police and fire protection, broader streets, additional schools and the like.

This information will be submitted to Jacobs sometime this week.

U. S. Cotton Use Rises Sharply; Exports Slump

Trade Seeks to Determine Effect of American Tariff Increases.

By the Associated Press.

American manufacturers used 186,964 more bales of cotton this August than last, but United States exports of the staple fell 58,997 bales short of the level recorded for the month in 1935.

The sharp jump in domestic consumption, and the continuing decline in exports of this chief agricultural export product were disclosed yesterday in a Census Bureau report.

The August figures were the first made public since the previous marketing season ended July 31 with a record of increases both in domestic consumption and exports. They were scanned by the trade for indications of the effect of increased duties which became effective against imported cotton goods June 20 by proclamation of President Roosevelt.

182,487 Bales Exported.

Cotton consumed last month was placed at 574,289 bales, compared with 408,325 in August, 1935. August exports amounted to 182,487 bales, compared with 241,484 bales in the same month last year.

Cotton experts at the Agriculture Department said the decline in world sales of the American staple began last June and that in July they dropped to 156,262 bales, listed by the Census Bureau as the lowest point since 1923.

Government spokesmen said the recent decline in world sales was caused by the relatively high price of American cotton compared with competitive growths, and the high prices of old cotton ready for spot sales in relation to future prices on the new crop for later delivery.

Spanish Exports Off.

War-torn Spain took only 279 bales of cotton last month, compared with 2,220 in July, 16,167 in June and 4,876 in August last year.

Only the United Kingdom increased its takings of the American staple in August, compared with the previous year.

The domestic picture was termed bright by the Government experts. They said that while mill stocks were slightly higher, stocks in warehouses were less than last year.

The totals were 752,219 bales in consuming establishments this August and 648,533 last year, and 4,336,724 bales in public storage and at compresses this August and 5,895,412 in 1935.

Groom and Miss Sarah Frances Miller; three sisters, Mrs. George E. Torrey, Mrs. B. W. Brockett, Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. Dion S. Birney, and two brothes, W. C. and Allison N. 12,000 Begin New Catholic School Session

Increase of 600 Expected; Enrollment This Week for New D. C. Pupils.

Approximately 12,000 Catholic school boys and girls, some eager, others lagging, dropped their playthings yesterday and buckled down to the long nine months of studies as classes began in parochial schools.

Catholic school student enrollment is expected to be about 600 higher this year than last year, Dr. John L. Barrett, superintendent of the Bureau of Education for the Archdiocese of Baltimore, said yesterday. Ten thousand of the pupils, he said, attended their first classes of the year in graded schools. About 2,000 others, he added, were enrolled in private and high schools throughout the city.

Next Monday an army of 93,000 public school students will march back to classes, which begin this year a week later than heretofore.

All children not on public school rolls at the close of last year who wish to enter the graded schools and kindergartens will apply for admission tickets at schools nearest their home, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, stated.

Principals at Buildings.

Principals will be at all the buildings Friday and Saturday this week from 8 to 10 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m., Dr. Ballou said.

Stressing the point that law requires all children admitted to the public schools be vaccinated or otherwise protected against smallpox, Dr. Ballou urged parents to bring vaccination certificates for their children with them. Birth certificates must also be presented before a child may be admitted to school.

Reminding motorists of approaching school days, the American Automobile Association yesterday sounded a Nation-wide appeal for safe and sane driving.

The appeal warned drivers against unnecessary speed in the vicinity of schools and urged all motorists to co-operate in a drive to protect the lives of children.

Thousands of children who are going to schcool for the first time this year are not familiar with the hazards of the highway," an A. A. A. statement said. "It is up to the men and women who drive automobiles to be ever on the alert for these unsuspecting youngsters."

Fall months, the statement continued, are the most dangerous traffic months in the year. To promote safety where children are concerned the auto club urged drivers to watch and obey the schoolboy patrolman.

"Be on the watch for the white Sam Browne belts," the association statement warned. "These youngsters wearing the belts number a quarter million throughout the Nation and are trained to hold their schoolmates on the curb until it is safe for them to cross.

"Parents, as well as motorists, are responsible for the safety of children," the statement continued. "They should accompany the child to school for a few days and show him the safest route."

Hasselbalch Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for George Hasberselbalch, 75, head of the blueprint department of Barber & Ross, local building supply firm, will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at Chambers' undertaking establishment, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Hasselbalch died in Providence Hospital Sunday from injuries suffered in a fall several weeks ago.

Note Clew in Hunt For Two Aviators

Winnipeg, Sept. 14 (AP).—With the first clew uncovered, searching planes droned over the wilderness of the Black River country of the northwest territories today, seeking two lost members of the Royal Canadian Airforce before winter sets in.

A note found on an empty gasoline drum, apparently tossed from the plane of Flight Lieut. Sheldon Coleman and Aircraftsman J. Forty, was the first hint that the two were forced down because of fuel shortage. They have been missing since August 17.

A wireless message to Squadron Leader R. S. Grandy here told of the finding of the note by one of the planes taking part in the search. The message read:

"Drum from aircraft 644 found 1 mile north of Lac de Gras with message stating that one hour's gas remained and that they would fly south for 35 minutes. Search continuing."

Coleman and Forty carried only a few days' rations with them when they disappeared.

Former Power Aid Wins Libel Victory

A District court verdict awarding Frank E. Bonner, former executive secretary of the Federal Power Commission damages of $45,000 because of libelous statements concerning him which appeared in the Washington Herald and Washington Times in 1930, was affirmed by the United States Court of Appeals in a decision handed down yesterday. Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens wrote the opinion, which was unanimous.

In sustaining the verdict, the Appellate Court overruled the Washington Times Co., Inc., on all points raised in its plea for a reversal.

The points were that the lower court trial justice erred in instructions given the jury "especially in relation to an asserted defense of qualified privilege and in relation to damages; ruling upon the admissibility of evidence; refusal to grant a motion for a new trial because of alleged interference with a juror, misconduct of counsel; undue restriction by the court of comment by counsel, and prejudice on the part of the jury."

Contest letters, on the merits of which prizes will be awarded, must be accompanied by the contestant's predictions, indicated on the Presidential Poll Prediction Form printed on this page, or on a facsimile of that form drawn by the contestant. (Letters will not be judged on the basis of literary merit—but, rather, on the clearness, conciseness and simplicity of the contestant's explanation of the method and the material used in arriving at his, or her, predictions. THE LETTER OF A 15-YEAR-OLD SCHOOL BOY OR GIRL—WHICH TELLS, BRIEFLY AND CLEARLY, HOW SHE ARRIVED AT HER CONCLUSIONS AS TO WHICH CANDIDATE WOULD WIN AND WHICH STATES HE WOULD CARRY—WILL BE JUDGED ON AN EQUAL BASIS WITH THAT OF A POLITICAL EXPERT.

RULES: 1. It is not necessary that contestants be subscribers to The Washington Post. (Copies of AMERICA SPEAKS polls, special articles on election trends in various parts of the country and other similar material of assistance to the contestant, may be obtained at The Washington Post Building, in The Post library, or in copies of The Post on file at the various public libraries.)

2. Contest opens today and closes at midnight, Friday, October 30, 1936. (All contest letters, accompanied by Presidential Poll Prediction Forms, must be received at The Washington Post Building, E street at Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C., by that time or in mailed envelopes postmarked previous to that time.)

3. All persons are eligible to enter the contest, with the exception of employes of The Washington Post and employes of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

4. Each contestant may submit only one entry.

5. The Washington Post will be the sole judge in awarding the 34 cash prizes, totaling $1,000.00.

6. Winners will be announced as soon as possible after official results of the election are known and the winners of first, second, third and fourth prizes must call in person at The Washington Post to receive their awards. Checks will be mailed to the other 30 winners.

PRIZES: First, $500.00. Second, $200.00. Third, $100.00. Fourth, $50.00. Fifth Prize to Thirty-fourth Prize, $5.00 each.

INSTRUCTIONS: It is suggested that contestants read the results of Nation-wide polls, on the comparative standings of the two major party candidates with the voters of the country, taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion and published exclusively, in Washington, in The Washington Post. The first Landon-Roosevelt America Speaks poll was published July 12; the second, August 9; third, August 23; fourth, September 6. Other polls, indicating the current strength of each candidate in each of the 48 States, will be published in The Washington Post Sunday, September 20; Sunday, October 4, and Sunday, October 18.

These polls, scientifically conducted, will indicate the trend of public sentiment for each of the candidates between now and the election, will measure the "shift" from one candidate to the other.

It is also suggested that contestants consult the special articles appearing in The Post from time to time, written by Claude E. Robinson, analyzing various other national election polls and straw votes and their significance. Also of value to the contestant will be The Post's regular, daily and Sunday, political articles, political news stories, midweek releases from the American Institute of Public Opinion on the voting trends in various States and sections of the country, Franklyn Waltman's daily column, "Politics and People," and various other Post political features, increasing in number as the date of the election nears.

Virginia Expects 18 Million Tourists

By the Associated Press.

Wilbur C. Hall, Virginia conservation and development commissioner, estimated yesterday 18,000,000 persons will visit Virginia this year, with tourist business for 1936 amounting to approximately $150,000,000.

"This summer has been one of the best tourist seasons in Virginia's history," he said, "and the indications are that the fall will equal if not surpass any previous autumn."

Here for a conference with National Park Service officials on a uniform marking system for national battlefield parks in the State, Hall said his commission now is preparing the first formal advance notice on the best dates to see autumn leaves from Skyline Drive.

Attorneys Shifted For Peonage Trial

By the Associated Press.

Gordon Dean, Justice Department attorney will present Government evidence of possible violations of the Federal law against peonage to a Little Rock, Ark., grand jury next Monday.

From a reliable source in the department, it was learned yesterday that George P. Jones, special assistant to the Attorney General, named August 12 to present the Government's peonage case, had been withdrawn and Dean designated as substitute. Dean left for Little Rock last Friday.

The department investigated possible violations of antipeonage laws during the recent strike of Southern sharecroppers sponsored by the Southern Tenant Farmers Union.

Gov. J. M. Futrell of Arkansas recently disclosed plans for a South-wide conference to study share-cropping practices.

Jerseyite Found Guilty Of Flogging His Son, 17

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 14 (AP).—Arthur Delmont, of Union, was found guilty of assault today after his 17-year-old son, George, testified he had been whipped on the bare back with a cat-o'-nine-tails.

Delmont admitted the lashing, but said it was necessary to discipline his son for disobedience and backwardness in school.

Col. Thomas Anderson Dead in Hot Springs

Col. Thomas M. Anderson, 61, U. S. A., retired, died at the Army and Navy Hospital in Hot Springs, Ark., yesterday. He went there for treatment from his home in Seattle, Wash., a month ago.

His body will be brought here for burial, with full military honors, in Arlington Cemetery.

Norwegians Fear New Rock Slides

Loen, Norway, Sept. 14 (AP).—Survivors of yesterday's tragic avalanche and flood in the beautiful Lake Loen Valley tonight prepared to flee the district, fearing new catastrophies.

Masses of rock, loosened by the death-dealing slide, hung precariously from ledges on the Rogne Mountains.

Sounds like thunder from time to time warned survivors that small landslides were still being built.

Nineteen bodies of the tragedy's victims were temporarily laid out in a small schoolhouse, but 74 persons, including 30 children, were still unreported.

The avalanche, which roared down upon the lake and drove its waters into a tidal wave, almost wiped out two villages—Bodal and Nesdal.

DISTRICT CANDIDATES in the C. P. A. EXAMINATION

ANY CITIZEN of the United States, who meets the requirements, may take the District C. P. A. examinations. Consequently, the successful candidates in the 1936 examination included a number who had received their basic training in various states. Of those who received their basic accountancy school training in the District and passed the examination more than half were Benjamin Franklin graduates.

Excellent though the record of our school has been in C. P. A. examinations, we do not deem them to be the sole test of the standing of any school. Records of certain institutions, which are acknowledged leaders in advanced business education, show that only a small portion of their graduates have taken these examinations. This is largely due to the fact that about 85% of all accountancy school graduates (including honor graduates) never enter the field of public practice and do not take the C. P. A. examinations.

This school offers a course which includes public accounting and all the other principal fields of accountancy. Besides public accountants, our veteran faculty consists of tax specialists, Government officials, cost accountants, business executives, and men whose experience covers the entire scope of modern accountancy.

Woman Freed In Traffic Case Facing Arrest

Move Is Taken After Case Was Nolle Prossed by 'Friendly' Judge.

Overriding court action which freed a woman traffic offender before her scheduled appearance in court, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal yesterday demanded the accused motorist's trial by ordering a warrant issued for her arrest.

His action followed a conference with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, who started an inquiry after the incident was reported by Capt. Milton D. Smith, traffic division commander.

A Police Court judge, it was alleged, ordered a parking charge against the woman nolle prossed, although at the time he was presiding in an another branch of court. And at the same time he dismissed an additional charge of disorderly conduct when the woman's father, in open court, admitted he was "a personal friend" of the judge.

The woman named in papers issued yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel James Lauderdale is Miss Florence Pessagno, 35, of Relay, Md. No date has been set for trial.

Indicating the judge's unusual nolle pross order would be set aside, Corporation Counsel Seal declared:

"I ordered my assistant at Police Court to issue papers in the case and proceed with prosecution. My action was prompted by a report of the matter from Maj. Brown."

Maj. Brown said he would present the matter to the District Commissioners for investigation.

High ranking officials in both legal and police circles assailed the judge's order.

A downtown law firm head declared:

"I am as ready as anyone to help out a friend—but I feel the judge in question overstepped the bounds of his judicial power by refusing the traffic case a hearing in open court."

Said a police official:

"Our officers are attempting to do their duty. This type of case makes it difficult to maintain any degree of morale among the men."

The case was first reported by a traffic division policeman who arrested the woman for a parking violation. During an exchange of words, according to police officials, the woman called the policeman a "damn fool."

He escorted her to police headquarters and was preparing to book her on the traffic and disorderly conduct counts when a man, who said he was the accused driver's father, appeared to demand an explanation.

"I am a personal friend of Judge ——," he was quoted as saying. "I'll have this case dismissed."

The next day in court, the judge dismissed disorderly conduct charges when the woman denied she called the policeman a "damn fool." Testifying from the witness stand, the father admitted, according to the police report, he told the officer he was "a personal friend of the judge."

And when the policeman appeared in Traffic Court to press the parking charge, he found the case had been ordered nolle prossed, by the "friendly" judge.

Diary Reveals Benefactress' Love for Youth

Autopsy Is Performed on Rich Woman, 78, as Boy, 21, Is Held.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 14.—An autopsy was performed today on the body of wealthy Mrs. Anna Powell Crookshank, 78, while detectives examined her diary, which, they said, recounted a love for 21-year-old Thaddeus Pickens, held as a material witness in her death.

Officers said they would question the young poet and painter friend of the woman. Meanwhile, police chemists made laboratory tests of the contents of three bottles and three capsules found in Mrs. Crookshank's luxurious home.

The autopsy was ordered to determine officially whether Mrs. Crookshank died of natural causes, as reported in her death certificate. She became ill September 3 while she and Pickens were at a mountain cabin, and died soon after she was brought to her home here four days later. The certificate gave pneumonia as the cause of death.

Detective Lieuts. Arthur Stoll and Miles Ledbetter said Pickens told them Mrs. Crookshank gave him money, provided him with an expensive apartment and supplied him with a $1,400 automobile and a chauffeur for a recent trip to Chicago.

He also said Mrs. Crookshank recently changed her will to give him 75 per cent of her $100,000 estate instead of dividing it among ten friends, as she originally planned, the detectives reported.

Mrs. Crookshank's husband, David Crookshank, 85, tried unsuccessfully to divorce her three months ago, accusing her of an affair with Pickens. She and Pickens, however, in testimony at the trial denied misconduct and a decree was refused.

While Pickens was in Chicago, detectives said Mrs. Crookshank wrote in her diary:

"Suspense coupled with anxiety is painful. Death seems the only door that can give me relief—and it may be mine. O, how I need you right now."

Pickens said he met a prominent woman who introduced him to Mrs. Crookshank several months ago. He said he was wearing an old sweater at the time.

"She was sorry for me and gave me $50," he said.

He said she later established him in a studio apartment, gave him $140 a month spending money, hired a houseboy for him and furnished the apartment expensively. He became her secretary-companion after he returned from Chicago, he said.

25 States Back Plan for Board To Curb Crime

Purpose of Commission Would Be Similar to That of I. C. C.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—A proposal to create an interstate prison commission was approved tonight by representatives of 25 States at the sixty-sixth annual Congress of the American Prison Association.

The purpose of the commission will be to control interstate crime much on the same order as the Interstate Commerce Commission controls interstate business.

Delegates to the association of States signatory to the interstate prison compact, which drafted the proposal, said it would put an effective barrier across that area between Federal and State law enforcement which Attorney General Homer Cummings described as "the twilight zone, a sort of neutral corridor, unpoliced and unprotected, in which criminals of the most desperate character found unholy sanctuary."

Under the compact, the commission would be made up of one representative of each of the 48 States, to be chosen by the Governor after the Legislature of his State adopted a model "interstate prison commission act."

As soon as a State signed, the compact would become effective between it and other signatories.

A major goal of the compact was "to promote co-operation among the States * * * and the Federal Government and other agencies" in eliminating idleness among convicts resulting from Federal and State restrictions on the sale of prison-made goods.

To get the plan going quickly, the Association of States Signatory authorized its chairman, Col. John J. Hannan, of Madison, Wis., and its secretary, Howard Gill, of Washington, D. C., to ask "Governors of at least three States" to invite all Governors to an interstate meeting.

Col. Harry M. Fridley, Auxiliary Reserve Corps, United States Army, who died Friday in Mount Alto Hospital, was buried yesterday in Arlington Cemetery after services in Fort Myer Chapel. He was 60.

Col. Fridley was a native of Washington. He was a civilian employe in the Quartermaster General's office from the time of the Spanish-American War until the World War. In 1917 he was commissioned an officer in the Regular Army. Since 1926 he had been chief clerk of the Army Finance Department at Fort Hayes, Columbus, Ohio.

He is survived by a son, Harry M. Fridley, jr., of Washington; a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Laurens, of New York, and three sisters, Mrs. Edward Hall, Mrs. W. T. Walker, and Mrs. C. C. Archibald, all of this city.

Nude Bathing Forecast.

Chicago, Sept. 14 (AP).—Dr. Alois Knapp, national nudist leader and director of the Zoro nature park at Roselawn, Ind., ventured a prediction today that the bathing suit would go the way of the horsehair soft and the mustache cup. "Nudism will be practiced on the beaches not many years hence," he said.

Eleanor Powell Picks Best Tap Artists in World

Chooses Robinson, Whitney, Astaire, Bolger and Rogers.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 14.—Succumbing to the All-America picking vice, Eleanor Powell, bronze-haired film hoofer, names her selections for the five "world's greatest" tap dancers.

Powell nominates:

Bill Robinson, Negro, who never took a lesson in his life, "because he is the grandfather of tap dancing."

Ginger Rogers, because "she mixes gracefulness wiht a superlative amount of charm"—whatever that means.

Ray Bolger, because he's the most eccentric, and Eleanor Whitney, because she's the fastest.

Powell modestly refrains from naming herself, but since she has been widely touted as top tapper her nominations are probably not for the "five world's greatest" but for the five next greatest.

It is easy to pick a quarrel with her "team," since she has merely chosen current box office tops among dancers, apparently without any recourse to other standard of ability.

At Random, a few names conspicuously absent which are hard to laugh off in any league are Paul Draper, Ruby Keeler and Charles Collins.

Further, the Powell All-America suffers from the malady of all All-Americas — the selector just hasn't seen all possible selectees.

By her own estimate there are no less than 25,000 professional tap dancers in the United States, and probably at least four times that many amateurs.

But it goes to show what a menace tap dancing has become.

Simone Simon, imported bundle of French temperament, has been withdrawn from Warner Baxter's "White Hunter," after a week's shooting, and will be replaced by June Lang.

Studiomen say its really influenza this time. Simon was similarly "withdrawn because of illness" from "Under Two Flags" last winter, and replaced by Claudette Colbert, who cleaned up in the part. Looks like a break for Lang.

Admirers of the late Rudyard Kipling better brace themselves for this one. The British writer's "Wee Willie Winkie" has been purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox for picture purposes, and who do you suppose is to play "Wee Willie?" None other than Shirley Temple!

Groucho Marx will observe the twenty-fifth anniversary of his debut on the stage September 25, but he says, after mature deliberation, that he won't celebrate it. Asked the greatest difference in show business then and now, Marx remarked:

"There are any number of ways an actor can get his picture in the papers now, but when I started there was only one—he had to die."

James Stewart is burning with ambition to meet his across-the-street neighbor, Greta Garbo, but three weeks trying have got him nowhere, because Garbo is studiously invisible on the studio lot and an eight-foot fence surrounds her house. Stewart says he has one best plan he's saving as a last resort. If worse comes to worst, he has a couple of accomplished digging dogs which could tunnel under the Garbo outerworks.

About The Showshops

(With Gerald G. Gross, Batting for Nelson B. Bell)

PROVING her telegram last week to Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater, was more than a sentimental gesture, Katharine Cornell yesterday announced in New York she will appear here Thanksgiving week in the world premiere of Maxwell Anderson's "The Wingless Victory."

K. CORNELL.

She and her stage director-husband, Guthrie McClintic, planned at first to introduce their latest work at the National December 7, 101st anniversary of the opening of what is now Washington's only legitimate playhouse.

"But they finally came to the conclusion," says the note to this desk from Ray Henderson, in Cornell's press spokesman, "that since Miss Cornell many times has been asked to open one of her productions in the Capital they would take this opportunity to do so, especially in view of the splendid reception this city gave her on her last two visits when she acted 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street' and 'Romeo and Juliet.'"

The star of "The Green Hat," "Alien Corn," "Romeo and Juliet," "The Barretts" and other hits plays a Malay princess in this latest opus from the pen of Mr. Anderson. She is the bride of a New England sea captain, the scene is Salem, Mass., the year 1800, and "Wingless Victory" is the name of the ship in which Western husband brings back Eastern wife.

Settings and costumes will be by Jo Mielziner, this being the fifth production he has designed for Miss Cornell. Mr. McClintic, of course, will direct. He's called the shots in every Cornell play since "The Green Hat." Rehearsals commence late in October.

From Washington "The Wingless Victory" will go to Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Buffalo and Detroit before the New York opening Christmas week.

The death of Irving G. Thalberg removes from the motion picture industry a top-ranking figure whose genius as a producer was a guaranty of greater and ever greater films. His "Romeo and Juliet," in which his wife, Norma Shearer, makes her greatest bid as a dramatic actress, is generally considered to be the brightest feather in his cap. And yet, until a lingering illness resulted yesterday in his death, Mr. Thalberg's wide talents gave promise of even bigger things to come. His loss is irreparable.

To our Shirley Temple, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney, Dickie Moore et al., the English are answering with Nova Pilbeam, Desmond Tester and Albert Davies, all of whom appear in "Nine Days a Queen," scheduled at the Earle the week beginning Friday. And the chief among these English hopefuls is the 16-year-old Miss Pilbeam, last seen here a year ago in "The Man Who Knew Too Much," which was shown at the Belasco.

Although she has had stage training since the age of 5, it was not until she was 14 that Nova attracted international attention as a victim of divorce in "Little Friend." Her father is Arnold Pilbeam, actor-director-manager.

Bringing vaudeville back to the Earle after a week's lapse, "Cuban Follies" will be the stage complement of "Nine Days a Queen." Featured are Tito Coral, Don Zelaya and the Rimacs.

At the Capitol, "The Road to Glory," with Fredric March, Warner Baxter, June Lang and Lionel Barrymore, will divide time with a Ninth Anniversary Revue offering the ballroom dancing of Florence and Alvarez, legerdemain by A. Duval, "Red" Donahue and his trick mule, Stuart and Martin, comics, and the Elida Dancers. Also starting Friday are Gary Cooper and Madeliene Carroll in "The General Died at Dawn," at the Palace, and Warner Oland as "Charlie Chan at the Race Track" at the Columbia.

If "Swing Time" bows out of Keith's this week—and that would be a presumption, not an assumption—it will be followed by Carole Lombard and William Powell in "My Man Godfrey." George Arliss, in a revival of "The House of Rothschild," is due at the Belasco Saturday and a return engagement of "Naughty Marietta" will succeed "The Informer" on Sunday.

The Capitol yesterday issued an announcement which should result in the F street theater's ninth anniversary being long remembered by at least 25 married couples in the District and vicinity. The first 25 Mr. and Mrs. who communicate with the management and prove they were wed in September, 1927, the same month in which Loew's Capitol came into being as the Fox, will receive Annie Oakleys for anniversary week.

Registration of entrants in the annual one-act play tournament, which will be held October 12 to 24, will close tomorrow.

With its business affairs being conducted at offices in the Raleigh Hotel, the business of making scenery and designing costumes for the inaugural season of the Washington Civic Theater is going forward daily in a Greenwich Village alley-court near Connecticut avenue and L street.

Henry Haviland offers a program of magic and illusion at 8:30 o'clock tonight in Foundry M. E. Church, Sixteenth street near Q.

War Prevention Leader Assails 'Military' CCC

F. J. Libby Calls Proposal for Army Training Step Toward Fascism.

By the Associated Press.

A proposal that CCC boys be given military training was attacked yesterday by Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, as "another attempt to put America on the road to fascism."

Happy Days, a publication devoted to Civilian Conservation Corps matters, said in Saturday's edition that Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, commander of the Fourth Corps Army Area at Atlanta, had suggested to President Roosevelt that the CCC be expanded to take in every 18-year-old boy in the country for a six months' course in work, education and military training.

Asked to comment on the suggestion, Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, told reporters:

"The President has always advocated continuation of the CCC under existing policies."

In a statement issued later in the day, Libby said:

"This proposal brings immediately to my mind the picture of the militarized labor battalions that marched before Hitler the other day, and I see in it another attempt to put America on the road to fascism.

"The proposal is all the more shameful because it exploits the distressed youth of the land by making the goosestep a requisite for a job."

Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, was not available for comment, but aids said his views remained as outlined in the handbook for agencies selecting men for the CCC.

The handbook states that "emergency conservation work is not a military project."

An editorial in the same edition of Happy Days in which Gen. Moseley's proposal appeared said, in part:

"The topic of military training for men in the CCC suddenly has emerged from its taboo stage and is being talked about out loud. * * *

"If we teach men how to fight forest fires are we stimulating in them a desire to go out and set fire to forests just to see whether their training works? If men are trained to keep their bodies fit, will they seek out disease to test their health? * * * It does seem unreasonable to imagine that if man and nation are taught the meaning of war through preparation for defense against war they would, because of it, bring the destruction of war down upon themselves."

The Roadside.

"ARIZONA." The Roadside Theater presents the drama in four acts by Augustus Thomas, staged by Harrold A. Weinberger, with setting by Edith I. Allen and costumes by Dorothy Croissant. Entr'acte written, composed, and arranged by Mr. Weinberger, Betty Gray accompanying, at the Roadside Theater. Reviewed Monday evening; return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

With the revival by popular demand of Augustus Thomas' drama of love and intrigue in the United States Cavalry, "Arizona," the Roadside Theater brings to its final week the third season of plays presented in the Old Red Barn, out on the Rockville Pike.

Although last evening's production seemed slowly paced, it was, on the whole, a production superior to the earlier one, with love, romance, villainy, intrigue and other attributes of the melodrama nicely proportioned and offered with typical roadside effect.

Replacing Marvin Beers, as the sleek Capt. Hodgman, Ralph Fowler gave his interpretation, but missed to a degree that urbanity with which Mr. Beers imbued the part. But Mr. Fowler was good, just the same. Other new players were Charles Grunwell and Don Shank.

Of those who again scored in the parts they "created" were J. Edmond Veitch, George Farrington, Elinor Cox Karsten, Virginia True, Betty Gray, Milton Freedman, Richard Kreuzberg, Jean Smith and Fred Haskin, jr. The dramatis personae was complemented by Nelson Franking, Edward Stevlingson, Frank S. Koonce, Harrison Libbey and Michael McKnight.

Besides credited with the capable direction, Harrold A. Weinberger gave the play the finest ensemble entr'acte of the season, composing and lyricizing "Cavalry" and arranging "Old King Cole." Accompanied by Miss Gray, the number was lustily given, rousingly received.

Whisky Paralysis Laid to Starvation

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 14 (AP).—Ten men and women who recovered from whisky paralysis and alcoholic insanity while drinking daily up to a quart and a half of whisky, were cited to the Harvard Medical School tercentenary today in proof of a discovery that alcohol, which has been blamed for thousands of years, is not the cause.

The ten were relieved completely by food plus vitamin B. They were part of 75 alcoholic patients with whisky paralysis who were also apparently cured by diet alone. The ten cases were kept virtually tipsy all the time in a hospital to make sure that starvation was the main trouble.

All ten had whisky paralysis, medically called alcoholic polyneuritis, which affects the arms and legs. Several had insanity, loss of memory and confusion in thinking.

Drought Salted Water, Gulf Residents Complain

New Orleans, Sept. 14 (AP).—New Orleans citizens today complained that the drought had salted their drinking water.

Engineers for the sewerage and water board said a salt tang had been perceptible in the city's water supply for the past few days. Baldwin Wood, engineer in charge of the city's pumping system, said the water was safe, but that an effort to remove the excess salt would be made. He explained that owing to two years of drought and the low stage of the Mississippi River, source of the city's supply, salt water from the Gulf was creeping up the bottom of the stream.

"Barbers on Strike, Warner?"

The Red Pavilion

Voice Menacing.

Alfred Chetwyn's voice became menacing. "If you go on doing things like sticking melodramatic notes under Mal's door I'll wash my hands of you, Zelda, and you won't like the process."

"I'm sorry, Alfred. I confess I lost my head when I heard he was living here—next door to me, so to speak. It's the closest I've even been able to get to him." She stood up and went over to Chetwyn's chair. Tipping his face back, she kissed it lightly. "There's only one reason back of all I've said and done, Alfred dear. I want him to suffer, too."

"Well, that wish is probably already realized. I imagine Roger Mallard isn't any too happy."

Roger Mallard was in truth none too happy. Propped up in William Carter Wyeth's excellent bed, he had just finished reading the crumpled yellow pages of Bert's explanation. He was far from pleased with the report.

Up to this moment he'd been glad to spend all his time sleeping. He was beyond figuring things out. He knew dimly that Bert had paid him several visits. But they'd been silent ones "without any attempt at talking. He didn't seem to have the inclination or strength for that, either. Indeed, his only wish was to be left strictly alone, except for the ministrations of Ito, who anticipated all his needs and wants before they were uttered.

A stranger had fussed over him occasionally, but as this required no exertion on his part beyond swallowing prescribed doses and allowing his wrist to be held, he hadn't minded. Carefully planned and excellently cooked meals had been brought to him on a beautiful old Sheffield tray by a colored man of the most respectable appearance. Mal found out that he answered to the name of Ruben.

This was a big, strange, and delightful room where he found himself. A man's room, rather severe in design, but filled with taste and comfort. Below the balcony he caught a glimpse of a terraced garden, enchanting despite its overgrown appearance.

Legs Appear Weak.

Mal threw back the covers and prepared to make further and closer investigations. He was amazed at the weak behavior of his legs and the sickening protest offered by his heart. Ito, running in from a nearby dressing room, caught him and pushed him firmly back against the pillows.

"The doctor says you're not to get up until he gives you permission, sir."

"The doctor? Say that again."

"Sick? What nonsense! I'm never sick."

"Yes, sir. But now you're very much better. A little more rest and you'll be all right."

"Ito—I'm damned fluttery. Yet I've got to know how long I've been here—what's happened to me."

Ito promptly handed him Bert's typed pages.

"Mr. Glenford left this. It will tell you all about it."

Mal seized the yellow sheets. He read them through with steadily mounting amazement. A second reading left him hot and weak with humiliation . . . All his life he had enjoyed the most robust of good health, coupled with a vitality which others envied but never quite equaled. Only twice had these priceless possessions ever been assailed. Thus he had a healthy man's shame and impatience and disgust with illness. Mixed with these feelings was a hypersensitiveness which the years had subtly built up in him and which he was constantly having to fight. It was secretly a torture to him to be fussed and sentimentalized over, to cause even inadvertently the least commotion or comment, and, above all, to create any sort of inconvenience or embarrassment to those he was with. He was forever on unremitting guard to prevent just such contingencies, and his skill at it had become, he thought, as infallible as it was instinctive.

Then at a time when he wanted most to put his best foot forward and when he felt himself succeeding to have cracked up before the lovely Miss Wyeth's very eyes! What could she be thinking? Dear knows, how he must have alarmed her! What bother and inconvenience and anxiety he'd put her to.

And here was Bert plundering in and making preposterous arrangements whereby he'd go on kicking up his most abhorred abominations in this adorable girl's house. According to Bert, he was to stay on here indefinitely as a sort of paying guest. The place was to become a retreat where he could rest—God! —he'd like to!—and pull himself together . . . Mal's eyes filled with a lonely hunger traveled about the room. . . . It would be bliss, no less, for him to stay here. To cease all effort for a while, except the effort of enjoyment. To let himself go, normally, among the companionable things of life of which he had so spartanly denied himself. And still if he did so, far from pulling himself together, he'd doubtless in the end be pulled apart. . . .

Suppresses Sigh.

"She was keen on the idea, Mal," Bert wrote with an astonishing array of misplaced letters. "Quite impressed me as jumping at the chance, Insists, though, at doing it for the bare amount of the extra expense, and at the low price she sets, shows she's an unusually clever little manager. I think she's drastically hard up and needs the money, which certainly isn't going to dent you to speak of."

Mal put down the letter and suppressed a desire to sigh. Yes, of course, the money. That was what most people wanted of him. They never took the trouble or had the time to look beyond the golden haze of his financial glory . . . But he couldn't and wouldn't think that of her. If he could just know that she wanted him to stay for even the smallest reason aside from his money! He must clear out quickly—at once—before this insidiously beautiful temptation completely paralyzed his will and his judgment.

"Ito!"

"Yes, sir."

"Is my car here?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have it ready. I'm leaving as soon as I can dress."

"No, No, Mr. Mallard. The doctor he say you must stay in bed at least for the rest of this week."

"I'm leaving."

At that moment, after a gentle knock, the door opened and Ruben, bearing the Sheffield tray, brought in breakfast. He also brought with him a beaming delight in himself, in the morning, and in this new house guest that enveloped Mal's perturbed spirit with a sunny peace.

"Well, suh, you're lookin' fine this mornin', suh. I tole Miss Pam we all sho' would have you apry in no time. When a man gits down in the dumps there ain't nobody like Miss Pam as kin pull 'em out. She went out in the garden first thing this mornin,' 'fore the dew got off the roses, and picked that one special for yo' tray. She say to tell you good mornin' to' her and to say the rose is called 'Talisman.' And it's the kind of talisman that's goin' to make everything come right fo' you. Yes, suh, that's what Miss Pam say lookin' mighty smilin' like. Everything's goin' to come out all right. So you jest take it easy, suh, and eat yo' breakfast."

Paul G. Brock, Veteran of Two Wars, Dies Here

Was Branch Manager of Construction Company; Rites Tomorrow.

Paul G. Brock, a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World Wars, died Sunday at his home in the Mendota Apartments. He was branch manager of the Art Metal Construction Co., of Jamestown, N. Y.

Mr. Brock served as a volunteer in the Spanish War. He was a captain in the Quartermaster Corps during the World War. At the time of his death he was vice commander of the United States Veterans' Signal Corps Association, Spanish War Division, a member of the American Legion, a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Army and Navy Country Club.

In 1898 Mr. Brock was graduated from Eastern High School. Four years later he became manager of the company he served until his death. He was born in Jersey City in 1880, the son of the late Henry and Lena Brock, of Washington. At one time his father was owner of the old Continental Hotel here.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Anna Compton Brock; a daughter, Mrs. James Gallagher Bain, wife of Lieut. Bain, now stationed in the Canal Zone; and three sisters, Mrs. Herman C. Rakemann and Mrs. William C. Gilbert, both of Washington, and Mrs. Edgar H. Thompson, of South Orange, N. J.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Funeral Arranged For Mary Stewart

Miss Mary Stewart, 86, for 56 years a resident of Washington, and for the past 29 years treasurer of Marcia Burns Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will be buried this afternoon in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Services will be conducted at 3 o'clock at the residence of her nephew, J. Stewart Rice, 1481 Columbia road northwest, where she had lived during recent years.

Miss Stewart was the last of her immediate family. Her ancestry traces back through early Virginia times to New England to Capt. Greenleaf Clark, a evolutionary officer.

Her father, who died 40 years ago, for many years was a merchant of Alexandria, where Miss Stewart was born. The father, born shortly after the War of 1812, first lived in Front Royal, Va. He was too old to serve in the Civil War.

She is survived by Mr. Rice and another nephew, Capt. Charles H. Stewart, of Denver, Colo. Her brother, J. McDonald Stewart, died last January.

Marylander Weds D. C. Girl Abroad

Another Daughter of All Saints Rector Soon to Be Bride.

There are two weddings current in the family of the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Teller Cocke, of Chevy Chase—the first was the marriage yesterday afternoon in Stockholm, Sweden, of their daughter, Mary Clara, to Mr. Lawrence S. Barroll, and the second will be that on Thanksgiving Eve of their daughter, Betty, and Mr. Peyton Winfree, jr., of Lynchburg, Va., to whom her engagement has just been announced.

Mrs. Cocke and her daughter, whose marriage to Mr. Bowen S. Crandall, of Chevy Chase, was recently annulled, left for Sweden a few weeks ago for her wedding to Mr. Barroll. The ceremony was performed at Christ Church, in Stockholm, at 4 o'clock yesterday, and was attended only by the bride's mother and a few close friends. The bride was married in her traveling costume, a rust-colored wool suit with a wolf collar. The couple left immediately for a wedding trip to Finland, and will return to Stockholm to reside. Mrs. Cocke will sail from Gothenburg, September 19, on her return home.

Mr. Barroll, the son of Col. and Mrs. Morrris Barroll, of Kensington, Md., was graduated from West Point, but is now representative of General Motors in Sweden and Finland. He met his bride while on a visit at the home of his parents this summer. She is one of the four daughters of the Rev. Mr. Cocke, rector of All Saints' Church, in Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Cooke, all popular and well known in Washington. She is also a niece of Gen. William H. Cocke. Her other sisters are Mrs. John Paul Mook, of Morristown, N. J., and Mrs. Nathaniel Barker, wife of Lieut. Barker. Lieut. and Mrs. Barker now live in Philadelphia.

This afternoon Miss Sally Mitchell LeFevre is entertaining in compliment to her at her home in Tracy place. Tomorrow evening the wedding rehearsal will take place at the Matheson home on Mount Vernon boulevard, and a buffet supper will be served afterward to members of the bridal party.

Thursday night Miss Cassie Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Parker, of Bethesda, will be hostess at a dinner in honor of the bridal couple.

The marriage of Miss Matheson and Mr. Hight will take place at 11:30 Saturday morning in the garden of the historic estate, formerly one of George Washington's river farms, which is her parents' home. Only relatives and a small company of friends have been invited.

Whittaker has returned from New York, where he went by plane Friday to meet the United States Army horse show team arriving from the Olympics in Germany, and the Chilean horse show team which arrived Saturday after a 30-day trip from Chile. Both of these teams with that of the Mexican army, which is already in the Capital, will compete in the Inter-American Horse Show October 22 to 25 at the Meadowbrook Show Grounds.

Maj. Whittaker is in charge of arrangements for the international event. He greeted the Chilean team which will be quartered at Governor's Island and will train there, coming to Washington about October 14. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

In Despair Because Girl He Loves Has Given Her Heart to Another, Boy of 20 Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy 20 years old and I can use a bit of your advice. About six months ago I met a wonderful girl a year younger than I am. She comes from a fine family and is not only beautiful, but intelligent, modest and charming—in fact, my ideal of womanhood. I could not afford to take her nice places, as I am studying to get ahead in my chosen profession and need to watch all my pennies. When I apologized for this she rebuked me for even mentioning it and said it was my company she enjoyed, not the places we went together. She is ambitious, too, and is going to college. Her home is down in Virginia, but she has been taking a summer course here in order to get ahead faster. She doesn't smoke or drink and believes a woman should never engage in argument or debate; at least, that's what she used to say.

• • • •

Now, to tell a little about myself: Before I met her, I had had two other experiences with girls. The first was a case of puppy love and soon forgotten. The second was with a fickle, silly girl, who showed bad taste about a good many things. She gave me what is known as "the run-around," until my common sense finally asserted itself and I broke things off. After that, I began to listen to so-called friends and decided to change my tactics with girls and, truthfully speaking, to treat them with little or no respect. Fortunately, I never did anything immoral while in this frame of mind, but probably would have if given the opportunity.

• • • •

Then I met this girl. Due to my wrong ideas, I got off to a wrong start with her, but she put me in my place at once. I apologized and told her the experiences in my life which were responsible for my contemptible attitude. She forgave me and said she understood. After that we had wonderful times together. We agreed not to go with anyone else and kept this pledge for about five months. Then she went home for a month. I went with her and met her family. They surpassed my greatest expectations and treated me wonderfully.

• • • •

On my return back to town, we wrote each other every day. Her letters were deeply affectionate. Then she came back to town and immediately I noticed a change. Everything I said and did was wrong. She seized every opportunity to contradict and embarrass me. Then for a week she was out to my calls, and a couple of notes I wrote her produced no answer. Then I wrote begging her to tell me what was wrong. And then came the final blow. She called me and asked me to come over.

• • • •

She told me she loved someone else; a boy she has known since childhood. She said she ran into him a few days before she returned to town, and they discovered they still love each other, more than ever. She had gone with him during high school days, but gave him up because her parents objected. Now it seems he has settled down, has a good job, and her parents no longer disapprove of him. She said we can never be more than friends. But, Miss Haworth, I am desperate.

• • • •

I never realized until I lost her how necessary she is to me. I can't eat, sleep, think or study. I have written and called her several times since our last talk, but I get no response whatever. She is always out. I am in a terrible state of mind. Is there any advice you can give me? Whatever you think best to do I will strive to do. Most sincerely yours, DUKE D.

• • • •

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DUKE D.: When a girl makes up her mind as definitely as this one has that a specific romance is dead as far as she is concerned, there is nothing to do but accept her decision. If she were not convinced that she loves someone else, you might have some straw of hope to cling to. But there is no type of love so hard to uproot or contest as that entwined about childhood associations.

• • • •

The best advice I can give you is to build up new and plentiful social contacts immediately. With the opening of school only a few weeks off, you will soon have ample opportunity for meeting interesting new faces and personalities in the classroom and on the campus. Make the most of this opportunity. Don't give way to despair. As Shakespeare wrote: "Men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them—but not for love."

• • • •

After all, you have something to be thankful for, in having met a girl who set you right in the matter of manners and morals. You know now that girls exist who are worthy of the best that you can offer, and that is a very fine thing for a boy of 20 to know. It spares him the necessity of making a lot of mistakes, and having to unlearn a lot of things in later years.

You might even take heart from this girl's experience. Evidently she loved very deeply once, and gave up that love for lost, and yet continued to find life worth living to the best of her abilities. And then around an unexpected corner she found happiness again. The same thing can happen to you, if you take up your present cross and carry it, with dignity and courage and self-containment.

• • • •

Disappointments in love come to nearly everyone. They seem to be an almost inevitable part of the growing process. And, as Phyllis Bottome writes in "The Crystal Cup": "Things that happen, however painful they are at the time, do not matter very much for long. Only how we behave to them matters." One must conclude that this girl behaved gallantly in the face of a similar disappointment in her high school days, and surely you would not brand yourself as being less gallant and resourceful than she. M. H.

• • • •

How to Make Money.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wonder if you could possibly suggest something for me to do to make extra money in my leisure time. I am a girl in my teens and work in a country postoffice. Over half of my days are spent in a leisurely fashion reading and mostly I am alone and very lonesome. The job doesn't pay much and I would like to know of a way to make a little extra money; and besides, it seems such a waste of time just to sit and do nothing.

I don't sew, so I couldn't possibly do fancy work or even make simple things for sale. I know there must be something I can do. It would help me a lot if you could suggest something. Thanking you in advance, I remain, yours very truly, VILLAGE GIRL.

DEAR VILLAGE GIRL: Not knowing anything about Federal regulations governing a postal employe's disposition of his working hours, it is virtually impossible for me to give you any suggestions as to how to make extra money on your Federal employer's time. Do you have a typewriter in your office, or would you be permitted to bring in and use one of your own for your own personal profit? If so, you might learn to type and do typing by the hour, if there is any demand for such work in your community. Or you might investigate the possibility of securing a notary public's license, when you reach legal age. Probably the only way of improving your lot is to get a better-paying job, which will provide more work during working hours. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Paris Decrees Retention for New Winter Season.

Paris (U.P.).—The long-sleeved dinner dress will remain smart this winter. The Directoire and Empire lines, which have inspired most of the dressier clothes shown in the Paris collections, are best adapted in dinner dresses. Trailing skirts, off-the-shoulder bodices and elaborate sleeves are displayed to best advantage in rich fabrics.

Brown and silver cloque lame is used with brown velvet trimming to make one of these dinner gowns. The bodice is made high at the neck in front, where there is an edging of brown velvet. The back, which is split, can be worn open or fastened up with tiny buttons covered with lame. The long sleeves are tightly fitted from the wrist to the elbow, then are pushed up in leg-of-mutton fullness. The fitted waist is encircled with a brown velvet belt, and the narrow cuffs are also of velvet. The skirt fullness is concentrated in back and continues to form a short train.

New Pockets Shaped To Look Like Glove

London (AP).—The new pockets are being cut in most interesting shapes, many in leather to form a contrast.

When worn below the waistline they may be split, half being placed on each side of the dress.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Iodized Oil for Bronchial Asthma.

When Roentgen first announced that new and powerful force—X-rays—its value to medical science was little appreciated. True enough, it would take a shadow picture of the bones of the hand or show metal coins in a closed pocketbook. Experiment—the everlasting "try" of science—has so enlarged its use that few disease processes today escape its all-seeing eye. The gall bladder, thanks to an ingenious dye, can now be visualized, and even the brain can be made to disclose its secrets of tumors and abscesses.

But progress came slowly. When we take an X-ray plate of the chest we gain a large amount of information, but the bronchi (the tubes that carry air) show poorly. The physician needs to know how much plugging has occurred in these pipes and something about their condition, whether they are dilated or not. We now know that if iodized oil is sprayed into the trachea (the tube that carries air to the bronchi) and an X-ray plate is then taken, the bronchial tubes and their branches stand out with great distinctness.

It was this procedure that led to the observation that many cases of dilated bronchi and bronchial asthma were improved following the use of iodine in oil for X-ray purposes.

Many Benefited.

A few years ago William Anderson, of Pittsburgh, began experimenting with iodized oil injected into the trachea in bronchial asthma, and found that many patients were benefited. He has now reported the results of this plan with 260 patients in whom the disease was chronic, all having tried the usual methods of cure. For the most part these individuals gave a history of asthma dating back many years, and in some it was regarded as hereditary, since parents or grandparents had suffered from the affliction. The only remedy used was the oil, although adrenalin was employed occasionally for acute seizures.

Anderson observed early that most of his cases showed a partial or a complete obstruction of the medium and smaller bronchi, and, strangely enough, under the influence of the oil this plugging disappeared. Some patients recovered so promptly that the conclusion appears warranted that a definite relationship exists between blocked bronchial tubes and the asthmatic paroxysms. The chief objective, therefore, is the removal of the mucous plugs and the stopping of the excess bronchial secretion.

The oil used is extracted from poppy seed and contains 40 per cent of iodine. It is nonpoisonous and nonirritating, and may be retained in the lungs for long periods without producing inflammation. It is absorbed slowly by the bronchial mucous membrane, although the element may be detected in the urine a few hours after injection.

Women Able To Save Time By Work Chart

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"FATHER works from sun to sun."

But mother's work can be done in even less time—if she is skilled in home management and runs her home on a business-like basis.

Miss Mary Rokahr, home economist, said so yesterday in her office at the United States Bureau of Economics. Recently returned after a three-month trip that included a visit to the Home Economics convention in Seattle, a session of teaching at the Oregon Agricultural College, a week's attendance at the Consumer's Conference in Utah and interviews with homemakers throughout the country, Miss Rokahr is more than ever convinced that the desirable home is the well-organized one in which mothers are methodical about everything from dusting and dishwashing to training their children how to plan their wardrobes and make every cent of their allowance do its full duty.

Before discussing this, however, Miss Rokahr touched again on the homemaker's problem of disposing of housework so that she will have some time for rest, reading and contact with the outside world.

"There are times, of course, when no matter how skillful a manager the housewife is, her working day extends far into the night," she said, "but generally speaking, a homemaker's duties in these times of modern conveniences should leave any woman plenty of leisure."

Discussing the correlation between homemaking and the training of children, she stressed that money management is one of the most important phases of home management, as well as of child training, "and the duty of the average mother is not only to watch her pennies, but to teach her children how to watch theirs."

She offered these suggestions:

1. Specific allowances for children from the age when they begin to make purchases.

2. The establishment of a place in the home where business records for both parents and children may be kept.

3. Encouragement of savings accounts to be started and maintained out of each child's allowance. "The best way to do this is to suggest specific things, such as a trip or a set of books or a coat, for which the money can be spent as soon as enough is saved," Miss Rokahr said. "Few children are naturally thrifty enough to enjoy saving for anything too far in the future."

4. Payment to children for the performance of special home tasks. "The bread-and-butter chores, such as washing dishes, dusting, making the beds or hanging up one's own clothes, would not be paid for," she said, "but if there are special chores—mowing the lawn or cleaning the basement—they could be paid for and would teach the youngster that harder work increases the weight of one's pocketbook."

5. Guidance in practical buying of everything from rouge to a winter coat that must be worn three to five years.

6. Business agreement between parents and children for the management of some phase of the home.

Miss Rokahr favors, also, the plan of requiring boys and girls to contribute some of the money they make toward their board, as well as toward their clothes.

Confident that the most difficult part of home management is planning, she pointed out that many a home in which children are well-trained in money management still lack the establishment of a routine that will dispose of household chores in half as much time. "Many a mother has been heard to remark that housekeeping would be a 'sight' easier if the children were more orderly," Miss Rokahr remarked. But in her belief mothers can do a lot to correct this state of affairs by inaugurating a system of housekeeping that includes:

1. A family bulletin board on which duties of each member are listed daily.

2. Family council meetings in which work and leisure time activities are discussed.

3. Variation in housekeeping jobs with the end in view that every child can "fill in" for any other at any time.

4. Arrangement of enough storage space to make orderliness easy. "In other words, a place for everything, so everything can be in its place."

Many Tunics on Display For Evening Costume

Paris (U.P.).—Maimbocher, who was the first to revive the tunic, uses many of them for evening. They vary in length from a short bolero-like type above the waist to the long three-quarter tunic. Several sheath-like ones in brocade are worn over very full underskirts of matching tulle. The tulle, being transparent, shows the legs from the knees down.

Work Out a Budget Plan

THEIR OWN HOME! And their budget plan made this "dream house" possible after only five years!

Cliff and Molly can hardly realize it. When a friend told them that $20 a month, systematically tucked away, would mean a down payment on a house in a few years, they doubted it.

But Molly's not the spineless, drifting kind. She split the family income, allowing so much for shelter, so much for food, operating expenses, clothing, advancement, saving for that house. The percentages were worked out carefully, to permit buying the house on their income.

Her food money is properly portioned for milk, fruit, meat, cereals, and so on. She never figured soap, service, telephone, light bulbs, gas out of anything but "operating expenses."

She and Cliff have been smartly dressed for they knew just what they had to spend, and could patronize sales, not buy piecemeal at top prices. They had good times and entertained now and then. Now, in their new home, the old rent allowance will help wipe out the balance due.

Does your money slip away on "spending sprees," when you overbuy and then hope it will all "come out right?" It won't, you know. Our 40-page booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," shows you the real way to spend. Specially planned blank pages for listing monthly expenses. Sample budgets from real life. Have what you want. Don't let your money trickle away for whims.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Pink and Black Lace for Feminine Appeal

Lace may be worn in almost any style this season, from the ultra-feminine to the strictly tailored. This was revealed at a fashion review of Paris and London costumes held yesterday at the Ritz-Carlton in New York. The frock shown above—a typically feminine Chanel creation—is of black and pink lace with tierred skirt. The above-ankle length of the skirt is now considered a smart note in evening wear.

Mother Needs Daily Schedule For Activities

Systematized Routine Must Be Employed to Keep Sense of Balance.

By Alice Clariss Richmond.

TO BE EFFICIENT and save her strength, the mother of a young baby must learn to organize her life. She must first make a schedule for the baby, and then plan her own activities about it. Unless she does this, she will find herself at the mercy of circumstances.

Young mothers are apt always to be tired. They are not used to the exacting demands of babies, and at first cannot adjust themselves to getting up at the same hour every morning, and going through the same routine day after day.

Once they make up their minds to it and work out a routine which becomes automatic by repetition, they will find that a baby, far from complicating life, simplifies it by regulating it.

One gets up at the same hour, feeds, bathes and beds the baby, washes his clothes and plans his lunch. These chores promptly and quickly completed, there should be two hours left free for house-work.

After lunch is over and the dishes washed up, the child sleeps again and the mother, if she is wise, lies down also, either to sleep or read for a full two hours.

When the baby has had his orange juice or whatever he is used to at 4 o'clock, he can lie in his crib or play in his pen for an hour. Then come supper and bed, and the evening from 6 o'clock on belongs to the grown folks.

In a city, of course, there is the question of walks to be considered, which complicates the morning hours. For children under a year old, however, it is often possible to place the crib before an open, sunny window, during the nap hours.

He probably gets as much sunlight and fresh air by this means, as driving about through dusty streets in a covered perambulator.

2-Piece Dress Suit Gets Leading Role

Paris (U.P.).—The two-piece dressy suit will play an important role in fall and winter wardrobes. Heavy crepe, cloque weaves, taffeta, velvet and moire are seen most frequently in these tailored and rather formal afternoon suits.

Black moire is used for one of these suits that is practical for everything from tea or cocktails to informal restaurant dining. The skirt is cut short and on the bias to give a slight flare at the hem. The hip-length jacket is fitted closely to the waist, then flares out in a peplum that dips lower in back than in front.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'm tired to death of hearing women crab about hating to keep house" said a lady we got to talking to in the park. "I'm not ashamed to admit that I love housekeeping . . . in fact I'm proud that I do like it. I want to do a good job of it too . . . after all it means a lot to me to take good care of my husband and the children and make a pleasant home for them. I worked in an office, too, before I was married, and so I know what I'm talking about when I say that housework is much more fun and more stimulating."

"It can be drone's work of course if you let it. But I don't. I try to run my home as efficiently as I'd have to run an office to hold my job. And in addition I try to give to it the initiative and creative I'd have to give to a job if I got ahead.

"The best use any woman can make of her knowledge of art, music or literature certainly is in enriching her home. If she's smart she will read up on those subjects, too, because they have lots to give a woman at home.

"She'll pick up more ideas that can be simplified for everyday use . . . do you know where I got an idea for our bedroom? From a painting of a sunset; there was the loveliest shade of pale pink in the sky, then some deep, deep blue shadows. The combination was lovely, so I translated it into wall paper and chintz and it worked. The walls of the room are pale pink, the woodwork is white and the curtains are blue and white plaid chintz. I've made a bedspread to match with a plain white top, the flounce of the plaid—then on the top of the spread I have two extra rows of narrow ruffles of the plaid . . . it's awfully sweet. The furniture in this room is mahogany, and the rug is claret broadloom."

Boleros Shorter.

Very short boleros of fur with modified leg-o-mutton sleeves are worn over woolen dresses and coats. Natural beaver boleros are shown with the green wools, which range in color from bright Kelly to a dull olive green. In ermine and mink, the boleros are worn over cocktail, dinner or evening gowns.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

IN THE PAST few years there have been several celebrated cases of scrambled babies reported from various parts of the Republic, and I can imagine nothing more disconcerting to a young mother—or even a young father.

ALICE HUGHES.

My reportorial instinct recently got the better of my natural sloth, and I went to Dr. M. L. Fleming, general superintendent of the city department of hospitals, and asked him, point-blank, as woman to man and vice versa, just how much chance there was for such a sad contretemps to happen here.

"Not a chance in a million," said the good doctor. "I can't recall a single baby mix-up here in 20 years, and well over a million babies have been born in our hospitals in that time."

Here are some of the ways the local medicos keep the little flowers identified. They drape the neck with a nursery-name bead necklace, or they seal on metal bracelets, or paste on adhesive-tape anklets. Darned if they don't even stencil baby's back with ultra-violet rays. And, of course, they have borrowed from the science of criminology and often take footprints, palm-prints and finger-prints. I left the good doctor's busy office much reassured, feeling that the young matrons of the village were practically certain of getting their own back from those huge hospital baby-parlors which always amaze and delight me!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN.—Our Policewoman Martha Misberger was enjoying a sandwich and a dish of oolong at a lunch counter the other day when a girl nudged her gently and said, "Say, I can read your fortune in those tea-leaves for two bits." "Read on!" said the lady gendarme. In no time she learned that she would soon get married, inherit a great mess of vulgar money and take a sea trip.

"Now I'll tell your fortune," said Miss Misberger. "You're going to take a trip in the pie wagon." And in no time at all Anna Adames, 23, was facing a magistrate on the charge of pretending to tell fortunes. Wasn't that lady-cop psychic, though? . . .

A much-needed civic drive has been started here, with Russian night-clubs and roof-gardens thriving as never before, and patronized by the titled remnants of Czarist times. We are trying to have it made a jail offense for a patron to request the Unholy Three of Russian tunes, done to death in a maddening way. They are "Dark Eyes," "Two Guitars" and the infernal "Volga Boat Song." Gen. Lodijensky, who manages a spiffy spot here, says it will be fine with him—but what other Russian tunes do Americanskis know? So I give up. Boys, play "Dark Eyes!" . . .

I noted George Preston Marshall, of Washington, Boston, New York and the world, lunching with a bunch of the boys at the Ritz the other day. Localities are recovering slowly from the surprise of his unheralded marriage to the quondam screen orchid-girl, Corinne Griffith . . . In the same room were Ina Claire, born Fagan in the Nation's Capital, and Honey Johnson and Kay Barker, two of the younger set's prime beauties. Kay is the lass now being ardently squired by Al Vanderbilt. Both these mere kids looked stunning in black, with pearls! . . .

Veterans Hear Plea for Peace At Denver Rally

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Sept. 14.—Demands that the United States stay out of war were mingled with warnings to the national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars today to "be prepared to fight."

The warnings and pleas for peace were voiced by Admiral Richmand P. Hobson, retired, hero of the Spanish-American War; Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, and James E. Van Zandt, national commander of the veterans.

The three speakers emphasized that the United States should avoid "entangling alliances" in Europe and and be ready to fight for peace.

Van Zandt, 37-year-old veteran, reiterated the V. F. W. policy of pensions for disabled veterans only.

"I expect this encampment to tell the Nation, in no uncertain terms, that we ask nothing for those of us who are physically well," he said.

He said veterans are "No. 1 pacifists of the world because we are ready to fight, if necessary, to convince other nations that our demands for peace must be respected."

Senator Steiwer, who did not mention the European situation, said to "prevent recruits to the disabled ranks, we can exert our influence as citizens against the half-baked schemes which threaten our peaceful relations with others."

"We can stand against military sanctions, and against bungling collegiate diplomacy," he said.

"We can support a self respecting American policy of minding our own business."

Admiral Robson declared that upon the Supreme Court rests the "integrity of the Constitution of the United States."

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Samuel Lubell.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 14.—Less than 20 rows of seats in the freshly painted Convention Hall were occupied when Mrs. Berniece B. Heffner, acting president, brought down the gavel to open the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes.

National Treasurer Cecil E. Custer sat on her right and Miss Berniece Saunders, one of the organization secretaries to her left. Also on the platform were a local priest and Corporation Counsel Raymond Kelly, representing Mayor Frank Couzens, of Detroit. President E. Claude Babcock sat tensely in the second row, the seats on both sides of him vacant.

The dynamite-charged atmosphere of the convention was lightened somewhat by the invocation and the remarks of welcome by Kelly. The speech by Representative Robert Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Commission, also gave all the delegates something to applaud. But things began popping as soon as the credentials committee headed by pro-Stengle John Murray, vice president of the Boston Civil Service district, submitted a "partial report" on the seating of the delegates. By an odd coincidence all but three of the delegations from the so-called "New Deal" lodges in the District were excluded in Murray's report.

Committees.

Quite a number of delegates from District lodges were appointed to the convention's tentative committees by Mrs. Heffner, but, as was expected, none of the appointees was drawn from the ranks of the left wing delegates.

District delegates appointed were: Credentials—Thomas O. Fee, of Post Office Lodge, vice chairman, and Mrs. Maude M. Anderson, of Internal Revenue.

Constitution—James G. Yaden, Civil Service Commission, chairman; Charles T Hoffman, Internal Revenue, vice chairman; Charles Sharkey, Labor No. 228, and Mrs. Ethel M. Darby, G. P. O.

Adjustment—Harry G. Eubank, Public Health Service, and Lillimay Bowers, Navy.

Officers' reports—John E. Dwyer, AAA, chairman; Mae M. Kinney, Internal Revenue, and Patrick O'Dea, Navy.

Auditing—Larue Tanner, Internal Revenue, vice chairman; A. J. T. Meurer, Tariff, and Lillian M. Fowler, Adjutant General.

Capt. Thomas Breslin, of Public Buildings and Grounds, will serve as chief sergeant at arms.

We wonder how our George Googe does it. This A. F. of L. "trouble-shooter," who is serving as temporary chairman, is getting the applause of both left and right wing delegates from the District. When one faction stands up to applaud one of George's rulings, the rival delegates leap up and do likewise, as if each is trying to show that "He's our George."

Throughout Ramspeck's speech, which was a defense of the Administration against spoils attacks, both George and Babcock listened with the appreciative smiles of fighters who like a fighting speech.

A mild flurry was caused yesterday when Elizabeth Hale, of Resettlement Lodge, one of the supposed "red" units, appeared with a red convention badge. However, it turned out that red is the color for alternates. Regular delegates receive blue badges and visitors white.

Chief sales arguments used by District conservatives in boosting Stengle are his ability as a lobbyist and that his election wouldn't make for economy in that a Congressional contact man wouldn't be necessary.

Orange juice, potatoes au gratin, scrambled eggs and sausage, toast and coffee was the menue at the secretary's breakfast, staged before the convention opened by Helen McCarty, of Navy Lodge. Mrs. Berniece Heffner, Mrs. Custer, Mrs. Stengle, National Vice Presidents Henrietta Olding and Rena B. Smith and Laura Tracy, of the Civil Service Commission, were guests of honor.

R. R. Strattan, of Civil Service Commission Lodge, wandered into the caucus for John R. W. Smith, of New York, last night as mad as a hornet. Strattan was inveighing against the commission delegation headed by Custer and Yaden who were instructed by the lodge to support him for the presidency but who are reporting going for Stengle on the first ballot.

Md. to Begin Branch Road Construction

Southeast Business Men Informed State Has Land Options.

Action Ends Three-Year Stalemate With District Unit.

A 3-year stalemate between the District Highway Department and Maryland State Roads Commission over development of Branch road southeast as a direct route to Southern Maryland, appeared to be ended, the Southeast Business Men's Association said last night.

Louis Frick, secretary of the latter group, holding its first meeting of the season, said he had received a letter from Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the Maryland Roads Commission, stating that Maryland had obtained options on land needed for right of way and that contracts for grading and drainage would be let this week, so that concrete for the new highway could be poured by spring.

Confronted by Maryland's action, Capt. W. W. Whitehurst, head of the D. C. Highway Department, promised the association he would watch their work shovelful for shovelful."

Thousands Spent.

Bad feeling between the two road commissions began several years ago after the District spent thousands of dollars to widen and pave New Hampshire avenue near the District Line to meet a Maryland-constructed road that would provide direct route to the Baltimore boulevard for North Washington residents.

At completion of the work it was learned that Maryland would not construct a highway joining New Hampshire avenue. The road, a four-lane highway, was left unfinished, ending against a dirt embankment in Takoma Park, Md.

The new Branch road will afford direct route to southern Maryland by way of Pennsylvania avenue southeast and eliminate several bad curves in the highway to Silver Hill, Md., and other southern Maryland towns.

Split Budget Opposed.

A resolution opposing the proposed split budget for the District was unanimously adopted by the business men.

"A split budget," said C. D. English, chairman of the executive committee, is open admission of defeat by the Commissioners. If we get a split budget for maintenance and construction," he added, "it will end by our losing all proposed improvements in the District next year."

Use of the gasoline tax for any purpose but for construction and maintenance of highways also was opposed in resolution form.

Staunton Park.

All officers, with exception of Mrs. L. H. Brown, secretary of Stanton Park Citizens Association, were nominated for re-election by that group last night.

Mrs. Brown, who has held office for nine years, asked to be relieved of the post. Eelections will take place in October. She will be succeeded by William J. Bartle.

The association meeting at the Peabody School, Fifth and C street northeast, nominated H. N. Stull for president; C. A. Chadwick and W. M. Bartle, vice presidents; S. Merton Chipley, financial secretary; W. E. Monroe, treasurer, and H. N. Stull and A. H. Gregory delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association.

Citizens' Plea.

A ruling to prevent drivers from making left-hand turns into parking lots around the District Building, and on E street northwest, between Tenth and Thirteenth streets, was asked by the Manor Park Citizens Association last night.

Copies of a reslution to this effect will be sent Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and to the District Commissioners.

Decision Awaited On 1-Man Trolley

An early decision by the Public Utilities Commission on the application of the Capital Transit Co. to buy 20 used one-man cars and to adapt its 20 stream-line cars for one-man operation is expected, Richmond B. Keech, acting chairman, said yesterday.

Riley Elgin, commission chairman, who has been ill since early summer, is expected to return to work sometime this week, possibly today, and may participate in the decision.

A public hearing on the transit company's application was held in mid-July. Organized citizen groups, led by People's Counsel William A. Roberts, strenuously fought the proposal. Keech was the only commissioner who presided at the hearing, although Lieut. Col. Dan. I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, has since read the record and will vote.

Jones Is Named Chief Surgeon At Freedmen's

Succeeds Dr. Warfield, Who Will Retire On Nov. 17.

Dr. T. Edward Jones, 1505 Twelfth street northwest, yesterday became acting surgeon in chief of Freedmen's Hospital, succeeding Dr. William A. Warfield, who will retire on November 17, after 40 years' service. Dr. Jones has been first assistant to Dr. Warfield.

It was learned last night that Dr. Jones will be named surgeon in chief on November 17. The post corresponds to superintendent.

A native of Lynchburg, Va., Dr. Jones won degrees from Howard University and Howard University Medical School. During the World War he served in France as a captain in the Medical Corps with the 368th Infantry of the Thirty-second Division. He won the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in action in the Meuse-Argonne sector. In 1920 he joined the staff of Freedmen's Hospital.

Dr. Warfield, the retiring head, was born in Hyattstown, Md., in 1866, and educated at Morgan College, Baltimore, and Howard University.

Founded in the year of Dr. Warfield's birth, Freedmen's Hospital now covers four city blocks and has 350 beds. There are 80 visiting physicians on the staff, which also includes 24 internes and 108 student nurses.

It is planned to continue the "See 'America First" demonstration until at least October 8.

lina with the Corley family—romped about the streets, apparently forgetful of the tragedy. They range in age from 3 to 13.

On Sunday night they were found, and almost starving, by the Neighborhood House near their home.

"But I got a lot to eat now," Clarence, 11, said yesterday.

"What'd you have for breakfast?" he was asked.

"Well, we had water and corn flakes and corn pone."

"For lunch?"

"Well, we had water and some stew and some chocolate stuff."

Water always came first. "Don't you have milk?" he was asked.

"Shoot, naw. Water keeps you from being thirsty.

"And for supper?"

"Ain't had no supper yit."

It was late evening and they hadn't had supper and didn't know where the meal would come from.

Corley persistently refused to let Catholic charities intervene. Two representatives were there yesterday.

And five children and the jobless man and the graying grandmother, weared by 12 children, went to sleep last night on two beds and several pallets. But Clarence is sure they'll eat plentifully today:

"We'll have corn flakes and corn bread—and water."

Purple Heart Given To M. L. Johnston

Maxwell L. Johnston, noted bridge lecturer and radio commentator, has just received the Order of the Purple Heart from the War Department for services in the front lines in France more than 18 years ago.

Already winner of the Croix de Guerre and several other citations, Johnston makes his home at 1425 Chapin street northwest.

He left Central High School in 1917 and enlisted in the Army. He was hit by German bullets four times and gassed three times before the end of the war.

"I'm glad I didn't get the Purple Heart posthumously, at any rate," laughed Johnston yesterday.

F Street Reopening Is Delayed 10 Days

G. W. Student Union Will Shun Activity in Political Campaign

The George Washington Union, composed of students of George Washington University, last night decided at the first meeting of its executive committee to have nothing to do with the national political campaign.

The committee, however, voted to open the union's second year with a three-cornered debate on a main issue of the respective party platforms, probably the question of government in business. This will take place October 7.

It will also conduct a Presidential straw vote in conjunction with the annual union elections October 15 and 16. Voting machines for this purpose will be brought down from New York.

Plans were laid at the meeting for the coming elections at which students of the university will vote for the Presidential candidate of the Right, Center or Left parties. These candidates will be picked at party convention to be held at the end of this month.

After the elections delegates of the parties will be seated in the union on the basis of proportional representation. These representatives, with all the trappings of Congress, will debate on the outstanding issues of the day during the coming academic year.

Last year the Centrists, who are somewhat analagous to the Democrats in their platform, won 55 seats; the Leftists, 24 and the Rightists, 23. This year it is expected the Rightists will gain a few seats.

Demonstrating the "wobblemeter" which indicates if legs are tired or if the subject is under the influence of intoxicants.

Wobble-Meter Knows, Tells All, If You're Drunk—or Just Tired

First, the lie-detector.

Both are mechanical stoolpigeons which think nothing of betraying the wayward.

The wobble-meter would just as soon tell your boss your fitness for work "the morning after" as it would tell a policeman in a precinct station how many highballs you'd had and your fitness to drive a car. It is impartial, cold and conscienceless.

Dr. Fred A. Moss, psychiatrist in the medical center at 1835 I street northwest; Dr. Hobart C. Dickinson, of the Bureau of Standards, and Roy Brown, of the Firestone Rubber Co., are responsible for the instrument.

When they started out in 1929, they were merely trying to rig up something which would show how tired a motorist gets after a 300-mile drive. They built four before they finally perfected one.

They learned that wobble-legs, which results from the fatigue of motoring, are practically indistinguishable from the other, or malt variety. So now the wobble-meter is available to suspicious policemen.

For a test, the subject stands on two foot-rests, which hang from a pivot. If he is normal a little meter will click about 15 times. If he wobbles badly it will run up a total of 40 or more, every wobble registering.

A reporter tried out the gadget yesterday. He wobbled, and Dr. Moss' suspicions were aroused immediately. But science was wrong. The reporter had merely gotten up early to meet a train, and was only sleepy.

Dr. Moss said that might well be the case, and he quickly pointed out that the wobble-meter could be used to test aviation pilots who hadn't had enough sleep and therefore should not be permitted to take up a ship.

"Any disturbance of the nervous system," he said, "will be measured infallibly by this instrument." Equilibrium and stability are, it seems, greatly affected by fatigue, whether it be from a long drive, no sleep or use of alcohol.

Two Detectives On Trial Today In Gun Charges

Face Police Board Action; Accused of Lending Their Revolvers.

Two detectives will face a police trial board today answer charges of conduct "prejudicial to the reputation, good order and decipline of the force."

The two men, Detective Sergt. A. D. Mansfield, of the Tenth Precinct and Detective E. L. Dalstrom, of the Third Precinct, were charged several weeks ago for allegedly lending guns to two brothers.

The two brothers, John S. and Logan Wilton, were charged with impersonating an officer after they were arrested by Detective Roy E. Blick, of the vice squad. After their arrest it was discovered they had revolvers allegedly loaned them by the detectives.

Papers to be presented to the trial board today accuse Dalstrom of having "transferred and surrendered possession of a deadly weapon, to wit, a revolver without application having been made to the police department."

In the papers against Mansfield, he is charged with having loaned the gun and also without having notified the department of the transfer.

The charges were preferred against the two detectives August 25.

Gen. Boschen To Aid Drive Of Red Cross

Government Employes to Assist Solicitations in the Campaign.

Maj. Gen. Fred Boschen, chief of finance of the Army, will be in charge of the Red Cross roll call solicitation campaign in the Government offices here, it was announced last night by Lloyd B. Wilson, general chairman of the campaign.

Earlier it was announced that Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, had been appointed chairman of the committee responsible for the Red Cross drive in Washington financial circles.

Chairman Wilson, in announcing that Gen. Boschen would head the drive in the Government departments and offices, said:

"Gen. Boschen holds a key position as chairman of the all-important Government committee. A great part of our 1936 enrollment will come from the Government, and I am happy to say that, with the thoroughness and efficiency characteristic of everything he does, Gen. Boschen has organized in the many Federal and local government units a smooth-functioning organization."

All Co-operate.

Chairman Wilson said that all branches of the Government are co-operating with the Red Cross campaign committee, and that hundreds of workers in the various departments will act as key men solicitors when the drive gets under way September 27.

Gen. Boschen has a notable Army record. A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., and a graduate of Browne's College in that city, he enlisted in the Army as a private during the War with Spain. Later he served through 16 engagements in the Philippine Insurrection.

He accepted a commission as a second lieutenant in the Army in 1903. As a captain, he went into Mexico with Pershing's expeditionary force early in 1917.

In July, 1918, he sailed for France, where he participated in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

He served as finance officer in the Philippine department of the Army and in the Chicago and San Francisco corps areas before assuming his present post of finance officer of the Army.

Among officials who have agreed to act as department chairman in their own offices under Gen. Boschen's direction are Wilbur J. Carr, Assistant Secretary of State; Harry H. Woodring, Acting Secretary of War; John Dickinson, Assistant Attorney General; Theo A. Walters, First Assistant Secretary of Interior; Admiral Charles Conard, paymaster of the Navy; Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor of the District; Frank R. Sanderson, of the White House; H. D. Rouzee, assistant architect of the Capitol, and H. F. Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission.

"Happy to Help."

Fleming, in accepting the post as head of the bank committee, said:

"I am happy to contribute my time and efforts to the Red Cross membership drive in Washington. Everyone is familiar with the work of the American Red Cross. It speaks for itself. I dare say there isn't a man, woman or child in the District of Columbia who was not very much aware of, and thankful for, the magnificent relief work done by this organization in the devastating floods and tornadoes of the past spring.

"In pledging my whole-hearted support, I am sure I speak also for the other members of the financial circle in Washington who are serving on the committee with me."

Fleming and his assistant chairman, I. J. Roberts, assistant cashier of the Riggs National Bank, have divided the local financial group into four divisions.

H. G. Hoskinson, vice president of the Riggs National Bank, heads the first division—banks and trust companies. Fred A. Smith is chairman of the division of building and loan associations and real estate companies; John E. Parker, G. M. P. Murphy & Co., of investment bankers and brokers and finance corporations, and H. Lawrence Choate, Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of the insurance companies and agencies division.

Radio Control Lands Planes At D. C. Field

Building of Runway and Drains Necessitates Safety Steps.

A "zoned" system, with all airplane landings and takeoffs subject to radio control, has been placed in operation at Washington Airport, officials there announced last night.

Primary purpose of the innovation is as a safeguard against accidents due to the present construction of paved runways, but there is some possibility that it may become permanent.

From the control tower of the field, where the planes roar in and out 24 hours a day, officers on duty reported the system as highly satisfactory.

"It seems to be working out beautifully," said one observer, "and we've every reason to believe it will continue to do so."

Unless, indeed, the system is regarded as satisfactory on trial, transport lines now using the local sky terminal have indicated they may be compelled to abandon operations here during the period of construction.

Copies of a zoned chart of the airport are being placed in the hands of all pilots using the airport regularly as a basis for future radio control operations during the two months which will be required for completion of construction, Samuel J. Solomon, airport manager, said last night.

The pilot is required to contact the airport control tower before each landing. The tower then designates the areas open for landing. Landings will be made in only one direction from the tower.

About 1,000 feet of the proposed 4,200-foot main runway has been graded in preparation for the laying of crushed stone and slag foundation for the asphalt runway, which is to be 100 feet wide. An additional 200 feet on each side of the paved surface will be graded and rolled, making the available landing area 500 feet wide.

The airport has completed installation of what is said to be one of the largest gasoline service stations maintained by any air terminal as the result of the abandoning of the airline refueling pits in the loading ramp in front of the administration building.

This station is to be equipped to handle from 160,000 to 170,000 gallons of fuel each month. Already three large fueling trucks are in service, one of which has just been received from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., to augment the local fleet.

Cutting of trenches for the enlarged drainage system, now being installed as part of the paving program has been retarded by the concrete foundations of the grandstand at the former race track on the site.

These foundations are being cut out. Drainage construction will go ahead this week, and runway foundation work also is expected to start at the same time.

4 District Entries Survive First National Amateur Golf Tests

Rippy Victor In 21-Hole Struggle

Yoder, Webb, Burnett Also Win; Thompson, Brownell Lose.

Peacock Draws Bye in First Round; Upsets Frequent in Day.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Garden City Golf Club, Garden City, Long Island, Sept. 14.—Four Washington (D. C.) golfers roared their challenge at American and British stars in the first round of the National Amateur championship here today, winning their matches in rather impressive fashion—two of them dogged extra-hole battles.

Claude Rippy, District municipal champion, finalist in the National Public Links Tournament at Farmingdale, survived a hair-raising tussle with Marvin Ward, Tacoma (Wash.) ace with a 1-up victory on the twenty-first in what proved to be one of the most thrilling of the 82 matches on today's bill.

Yoder Among Survivors.

A few hours after the District ripper elimiated the Tacoma flash, third among the qualifiers in the coast-to-coast National Amateur qualifying trials, husky Tommy Webb, jr., of Washington Golf and Country Club, brought his football courage into play and defeated Charlie Boywid, well known Chicago municipal golfer, on the nineteenth hole.

The other Washington survivors were Levi Yoder, black-haired Kenwood golfer, Middle Atlantic champion, and Volney Burnett, Indian Spring's fighting fireman.

Garden City's famous and hallowed course, which has been changed very little since the peerless Walter Travis won the championship far back in 1900, was no place for faint hearts today.

What was expected to be a cut-and-dried opening day turned out to be perhaps the most thrilling in the history of this tournament.

Guilford Wins Thriller.

There were upsets, many of 'em—there were exciting extra hole matches—sensational bursts of scoring power—drama galore on the eighteenth hole—and glorious comeback feats.

When the battle opened bright and early this morning with the dew still on the greens, eight former champions were in the fight. Tonight only one had met defeat. He was S. David Herron, fat and fifty, 1919 champion, who bowed to Bill Maguire, of Houston, 5 and 3.

But the Old Guard did a magnificent job. While Francis Ouimet, twice former title holder, Walker Cup captain, sat out by reason of a bye, Jesse Guilford; the Boston fusileer, 1921 title holder, knocked in a 15-footer for a birdie deuce on the eighteenth green to eliminate Chris Brinke, Detroit amateur star, one up in a big upset.

Jess Sweetser, former British and American winner, played spotty golf, to trim Tommy Wright, of Knoxville, 2 and 1, and Max Marston, the Philadelphia gentleman-farmer, a former champion, won from Jim Fownes on the nineteenth hole. Chick Evans, twice former champion, did well by himself in defeating Paul Anderson, of Summit, N. J., 2 and 1.

Three other erstwhile champions—Sandy Somerville, of Canada; George Dunlap, of New York, and Ouimet, the Boston broker, drew first round byes, and will not play until tomorrow.

There were no Walker Cup casualties as far as the Americans were concerned. Johnny Goodman, the Omaha ace, former Open title holder, played only fair golf, to trim Hunter Hicks, of Chicago, 4 and 3. Johnny Fischer was erratic in his victory over Eddie Meister, of Cleveland, 6 to 5, and Walter Emery, the Oklahoma boy, runner-up to Lawson Little in the 1935 Amateur, played like a second flight golfer in winning, 1 up from Knox Young, of Pittsburgh.

Displaying stout-hearted golf that characterized the brilliant extra-hole finishes of both Rippy and Webb, Yoder rubbed out Bayard Mitchell, of Pine Valley's famous course, 7 to 5, and Burnett, last on the District list to tee off, came through with a victory over Brown Cannon, long-driving Denver golfer, 2 and 1.

Owens Backed By Ohio Board Of A. A. U.

District Unit Recommends Rein Statement After an Interview.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 14.—The Ohio District Board of the Amateur Athletic Union interviewed Jesse Owens, sprint star, today and then recommended his reinstatement by the National A. A. U.

Owens has been under suspension by the union since his decision to pass up a trip to Sweden with other American athletes following the Olympic games at Berlin.

L. M. Bloom, president, and James A. Lee, secretary treasurer of the Ohio board, sent the following message to Daniel J. Ferris, secretary treasurer of the A. A. U., following today's meeting with Owens:

"After the personal appearance of Jesse Owens and consideration of such facts as were available, the executive committee of the North-Eastern Ohio Amateur Athletic Association, of Cleveland, recommends the immediate lifting of the suspension ordered by the A. A. U.

Bloom said that if the registration committee of the national organization upholds the Cleveland board, Owens can be reinstated immediately.

Owens appeared to be considerably disturbed after his meeting with the board.

Asked what he told the board members, Owens replied:

"What could I say? I'm no professional. I haven't received any pay. My status is the same as it always has been.

"All they had was my stamtement in the past that I might turn professional. I hope to be reinstated so I can return to Ohio State and complete my studies."

Dodgers' Player Turns Salesman

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—Ambrose V. McCall, head of the bureau of securities in the State attorney general's office issued a subpena today requiring Randy Moore, outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers, to appear tomorrow and explain details of the sale of stock in an oil well which Moore's father-in-law is said to be drilling in Texas.

At the district attorney's office it was explained no irregularity is known to have existed in the sale of the stock which is understood to be distributed among members of the Dodgers and Boston Bees. The subpena was issued so McCall can ascertain if the stock was sold in New York State and if so whether the seller had filed the required certificate with the attorney general's office.

Giants Need Only 9 Wins to Clinch League Pennant

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—As the result of their victory over St. Louis today, the New York Giants were in a position tonight where they need only to win nine of their remaining 13 contests to clinch the National League pennant even though the second place Cardinals take all of their 12 games.

The Giants must capture only 7 to win the flag from the Chicago Cubs, even if the National League champions take all of their 11 games, including a clean sweep of the 6-game series with the Cardinals.

A defeat of either the Cards or Cubs would maek the task of the Giants just that much easier, as it would reduce the number of games necessary for them to win.

Grid Practice Is Called Off At Purdue

By the Associated Press.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 14.—There was no football practice at Purdue today.

Members of the coaching staff called off all workouts as students and faculty members mourned the death of Carl E. Dahlbeck, of Lyndonville, Vt., regular guard on the team, fatally burned Saturday in an explosion and fire in a shower room following the practice session Saturday afternoon.

Five other members of the team, including three letter men, were burned in the fire and are in a hospital here. Physicians reported today that Tom McGannon, of Evansville, most seriously burned of the survivors, was improved and has a good chance to recover.

Lowell Decker, of Reading, Mich.; Pat Malaska, of Crawfordsville, Ind.; James Maloney, of Oak Park, Ill., and John Drake, of Chicago, were reported to be out of danger.

Posthumous Initiation.

University of officials made plans today to hold services on the campus for Dahlbeck at the same time they are being held at hs home in Vermont.

Members of the Kappa Sigma fraternity conducted a posthumous initiation for him this morning. While members of the organization stood with bowed heads around his casket the entire initiation ritual was read and the Kappa Sigma pin was placed on the dead football star.

Dahlbeck's body will be taken to Lyndonville tomorrow and will be accompanied by William (Dutch) Fehring, representing the university coaching staff; M. L. Clevett, assistant athletic director, and George W. Burnell, jr., president of the Purdue Chapter of Kappa Sigma.

Dodgers Beat Cubs as Flag Hopes Dim

Mungo Checks Champs, 2-1, With Five Hits; Now Six Games Back.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Sept. 14.—The fading pennant hopes of the Chicago Cubs were given another severe jolt today when they bowed to the Brooklyn Dodgers, 2-1 as Van Mungo set the National League champions down with five hits.

The defeat, coupled with the Giants conquest o fthe Cards, left the Cubs trailing New York by six games with only 11 to play.

The Cubs got one run off Mungo in the first inning and apparently were headed to victory behind the shutout hurling of little Roy Henshaw. Although yielding eight hits in the first seven innings, Henshaw kept Casey Stengel's men away from the plate.

Then in the eighth, he weakened, walking Tom Winsett. Buddy Hassett bunted and beat out Henshaw's throw to first. Linus Frey walked to load the bases and send Henshaw to the showers. Lon Werneke was unable to stem the attack, however, until Babe Phelps, batting for Jimmy Jordan, had driven in Winsett with the tying run, while being thrown out.

Phelps also was responsible for the deciding tally in the ninth. Johnny Cooney's single and two walks set the stage for the blow, a single off Larry French, who replaced Warneke after the right-handed ace loaded the bases.

Chisox Beat Nats Twice, 5-4, 11-3

Appleton Loses First in 10-Inning Battle; Trio Pounded in Second.

By a Special Correspondent.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—The weather and Chicago White Sox were pretty hot today while the visiting Washington Nationals maintained a cool and calm attitude that got them nothing but a couple of kicks on their collective shins and almost the loss of their third-place league social rating. The scores were 5 to 4 and 11 to 3.

The one-two punch landed by Chicago may have been the deciding blow in the two teams' bickering for second place. It gave the Sox a three-and-a-half game margin over the Nats, who now must divide their attention between winning second and staving off the dangerously close talons of Detroit's Tigers, only a half game behind.

Washington made a brave showing in the first tiff, a 10-inning affair, and for a time it was on the verge of winning a clean-cut decision, boasting a 4-2 lead going into the last half of the eighth. At this juncture "Mule" Haas' bat made connection with one of Pete Appleton's Sunday pitches, driving it back to centerfield for a clean single that scored the tying runs.

Then Pete made the tactical error of passing Luke Sewell to get at Clint Brown, the pitcher, with Jackie Hayes reposing on second base. Clint shut his eyes and swung and, sad to relate, swung in the wrong place—for Appleton. It went for a single and Hayes home with the winning run.

But in the nightcap they might just as well have quit at the end of the fourth inning and gone home to a hot suppper for all the good the Nats did in the last five frames. Chicago helped itself to a 3-0 lead in the first two innings at Signor Cascarella's expense; and then, after Washington had registered a three-run protest tying the score in the third, Mr. Comiskey's Sox began running around the bases again, without Mr. Comiskey in them, of course, and before they finished they had a 5-3 lead and Signor Cascarella had retired in great embarrassment and confusion.

Phebus, the rookies hurler, followed him to the mound, picked up his trail there and followed him to the showers after working through the sixth inning. Hill batted for him in the seventh, with Monte Weaver assuming the chucking duties. He finished the game—but a poor second.

Joe Kuhel got the Nationals off to a flying start in the first game, bunting a fast one over the right-field wall for a home-run with two down, and Mihalic and Appleton put two singles and a sacrifice together in the fifth for another run. Chicago, however, picked up two in the second on a double by Bonura and singles by Hayes, Appling and Sewell.

Washington's half of the sixth opened with Kuhel again leading the attack with a single to center. Stone was safe on a hard smash to Bonura and Travis filled the bases when Piet fumbled his bunt. Sington contributed his nickel's worth to the merry-go-round, a sizzling single to center that scored two runs—Washington's last runs of the game.

In all 18 hits rattled off Chicago's bats in the second game, while Vernon Kennedy black-jacked the Senators into submission with a five-hit performance. After the third Kennedy had things pretty much his own way. The fifth Washington hit was a contribution of "Shanty" Hogan, behometh catcher, who instigated a one-man rally that was short-lived. "Shanty" singled with one out and was promptly recalled to be decorated while DeShong went in to run for him. Jimmy didn't get very far, however, when Reynolds hit into a double-play.

Scandal in Old Britain

Whether British lady cricket players are to expose their legs while playing cricket is a question that has aroused a nation-wide storm of controversy in England. The whole thing is to be threshed out at a meeting of the British Women's Cricket Association.

Leto Is Awarded Split Decision Over Furr

By Bill McCormick.

A rousing last-round rally carried Jimmy Leto, fifth-ranking welterweight, to a split decision over unpredictable Phil Furr, District 147-pound titleholder who fought as he never fought before to the great delight of some 1,500 highly satisfied fight fanatics at Griffith Stadium last night.

For nine rounds the two contenders for the crown now adorning the noggin of Barney Ross, battled on even terms, with Leto forced to resort to every strategem in his bag of tricks to overcome Furr's great advantage in weight, height and reach.

In the tenth—and final—round, Leto unleasher the most furious and ferocious rally shown to jaded Capital clout addicts for many a year. He belted Phillip with rights and lefts indiscriminately as Furr pumped away desperately with both hands to the body in a frantic, but futile, effort to stave off the rally and at least preserve the even-Stephen honors he had earned in preceding rounds.

Leto's determination, superior ringmanship and greater speed told the story—a story that found Referee Charley Reynolds and Judge Charles Dunn writing Leto the winner, as Judge Bob Eller declared in favor of Furr.

The local titleholder answered the opening bell with a concerted, two-fisted attack to the body which was only the forerunner of what was to come. Instead of posing and waiting while his opponent batted him about, Phillip kept matters in his own hands in a very satisfactory manner until the tenth round, when Leto shot the works to obtain his victory. As a result of his aggressive style, Furr's nose did not begin to bleed until the tenth round, instead of spurting claret from the outset, as is its custom.

Bewildered by his angular opponent's reach and height, Leto was almost completely at a loss for two rounds, but in the third he discovered that Furr could be banged

Hubbell Beats Cards, 7 to 5, For 24th

Victory Is 14th in Row for Hurler; Dean Is Used Again.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—The Giants and Cardinals ended their warfare for 1936 today when pace-setting New Yorkers turned back the Gas-House Gang, 7 to 5, to take the most important series of the year for both teams.

As a result the Cardinals left tonight four and one-half games behind the league leaders. Staggering under the strain of three consecutive double-headers and with their pitching staff near collapse, the Red Birds have little chance of taking up much of the slack in their remaining dozen games.

A banner Monday crowd of 24,762 turned out to see the finale between the arch rivals, and to cheer Carl Hubbell, the Giants' lean southpaw, as he registered his twenty-fourth triumph of the season and his fourteenth in a row.

Called in from the bullpen to protect a two-run lead, Hubbell twirled the last five innings and received credit for the victory.

Fist Fight.

Except for Pitcher Ed Heusser's first major league homer with two down in the sixth, the Giant ace kept the Cardinals away from the plate. Infield blows by Art Garibaldi and Joe Medwick threatened damage in the ninth, but the best big Johnny Mize could do was left a high foul to Mel Ott in rightfield to close up shop for the Cardinals.

The proceedings were enlivened by a fist fight on the Cardinal bench in the seventh inning. Heusser and Medwick exchanged a blow or two before teammates could drag them apart. Heusser chided Medwick for a poor throw to the plate after Bartell had singled in the sixth, permitting Burgess Whitehead to tally with the seventh Giant run.

The first four were wild and ineffective, but Dean, despite the fact that it was the fourth time he has been called to the hill in three days, didn't give up a hit in the 2 1-3 innings he toiled.

High School Elevens Embark This Week on Tough Campaigns

Tech to Open With Tilt at Baltimore

By John R. Vosburgh.

Maybe it isn't due to election year, but the high schools have certainly elected some first-class football schedules this season.

From Central's ten-game slate to the eight-game calendars facing Tech and Western, one formidable opponent after another is obstructing the 1936 advance of Washington's pigskin pushers. "Breathers" are conspicuous by their absence, and Central, Eastern, Tech and Western all decided to brace their schedules with powerful out-of-town teams.

Tech will open what promises to be a banner year for local school football if all goes well, meeting Baltimore City College at Baltimore, Saturday. Coach Hap Hardell, who recently startled observers with the statement that he is "pleased with the spirit" the Tech squad has been showing, is renewing relations with the strong Baltimore school after an interval of three years.

No Field at Tech.

Getting a week's jump on the other schools, Tech will be playing its second game Friday, September 25, against George Washington High at Alexandria in an effort to avenge a 7-6 defeat last year at Tech. The Techmen, incidentally, may not have any field to practice on this year.

Principal Frank Daniel said yesterday that the field has been resodded and put in first-class shape and will not be able to be used this season. Hence, the game with Gonzaga, October 9, first game scheduled between the schools in many years, may not be played. The interhigh games scheduled for Tech's field probably will be played at Central.

Central High, interhigh champions, has added Fork Union Military Academy, Newport News (Va.) High and Waynesboro (Pa.) High to their schedule. Maury High, of Norfolk, has been dropped and so has Petersburg (Va.) High, but the latter will play Western this year, October 17.

Western Has Tough List.

The Fork Union game should prove one of the biggest non-interhigh series games of the year, since the Cadets were one of the strongest teams in the East last season. The schedule this year is the most difficult under Coach Hardy Pearce's regime and one of the most formidable in the school's history.

Eastern has added Devitt Prep, claimant of the prep school championship of the section. Coach Artie Boyd's team will invade Baltimore, October 16, to play Calvert Hall, and also meets its old rivals, Gonzaga and St. John's. Coach Dan Ahern is already rueing the booking of Petersburg for Western on a schedule which also includes St. John's, Gonzaga and Washington-Lee.

Kavalier Shifted To Center Post

Camp Letts, Md., Sept. 14.—Frank Kavalier, captain of the 1936 George Washington football squad, has been switched to center from the backfield where he has performed very creditably in the past.

The change was made necessary when Armando Salturelli, the only experienced reserve center on the squad, reported for training today with a sprained neck.

Kavalier always has been a good defensive man and one of the best blockers on the team. He must now learn to pass smoothly in order to hold the center position.

The team held a long dummy scrimmage this afternoon, with special emphasis being placed on blocking. It is generally expected that the team this year will have better blocking than last year, when weakness in this department cost many a yard on the gridiron.

All-High Star All Up in the Air for No Good Reason

Here's a shot of Charlie Jones, Central's captain and All-High guard, taken yesterday as the high schoolers began to unlimber. Just what Mr. Jones is doing up there is pretty hard to say.

5 All-Stars Sign For Game With Giants Here

Plans for the season's first football attraction here, the New York Giants—College All-Stars game, to be played Thursday night, October 1, at Griffith Stadium, gained momentum yesterday as the make-up of the college eleven began to assume definite form.

Five players, all former George Washington University stars, signed agreements to play for the college team, opposing their former teammate, Tuffy Leemans, who is making his debut in pro football this season. Harry Deming, field-goal kicker par excellence and a husky tackle, Red Rathjen, center; Sid Kolker, guard; Ben Plotnicki, quarterback; and Don Bomba, fullback, are those signed for the game.

All, except Bomba, are at Camp Letts, Md., working out with the Colonials' 1936 varsity squad, and are reported to be in excellent physical condition. Bomba is in the city but is in good trim after spending his summer on baseball fields and in swimming, and he plans to get in a week of football work before joining the full squad.

Officials in charge of the game plan to call the complete squad together for practice Sunday or Monday, giving the team 10 days of intensive work before sending it forth to battle. It will be difficult to get the team functioning smoothly, inasmuch as most of the men played together at George Telegrams have been dispatched to Bill Shakespeare, former Notre Dame halfback, and Paul Tangora, Northwestern guard, both members of the All-American squad which met the Detroit Lions and New York Giants, inviting them to participate in the Washington game. Both are expected to accept.

Ticket prices for the game will be scaled to meet the prices of all football fans, ranging from 55 cents for end-zone seats to $1.65 for box seats. Grandstand tickets will cist $1.10.

If present plans materialize the occasion will be a gala one with Leemans being honored by old teammates and admirers alike. There will be plenty of color, music and football.

Leto Gets Verdict Over Phil Furr

In a 6-rounder which followed the main event, Victor Vallee, of New York, outpointed Billy Bullock, a Washington featherweight.

Buddy Scott, light-heavyweight brother of District Lightweight Champion Scott, scored a fourth-round knockout over Rusty Baker, a surprisingly durable Baltimore fisticuffian, in a thrilling preliminary scheduled for six rounds. Boker was on the floor four times in the second and twice in the fourth before he finally failed to rise as Referee Eddie La Fond finished the te ncount with only one second remaining of the round.

Shorty Ahearn, knockout conqueror of Killer Lamar—Washington's own Joe Louis"—won a disputed decision from Bruce Alexander, a novice just out of the amateur ranks in Baltimore in the opening six-rounder. The bout was a gruelling slugging match from bell to bell, with Ahearn's experience finally deciding the issue by a narro wmargin.

Johnny Bellans, a sparmate of Leto's won a unanimous six-round decision from Roddy Davis, a local lightweight, in a fairto-middlin' preliminary. Roddy was doing all right until Johnny tageed him on his fragile jaw and slowed him down to a slow trot in the closing minutes.

SOX REALLY WON.

The Virginia White Sox ball club protests that the game played with the Petworth A. C. Sunday, and reported to The Post as a victory for Petworth, really ended in an 8-5 victory for the White Sox. It was their fifth straight win. Bob Bellman was the winning pitcher.

Sheeran, Healy Will Be Hilltop's 'Climax Men'

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Two of Georgetown's speediest and most promising leather luggers were ruled out of the race for first-team positions yesterday by no less an authority than Jack Hagerty, ringmaster of the Hilltop football show, who decided to relegate "Peanuts" Sheeran and "Lightnin" Healy to reserve ratings.

Now Sheeran and Healy are two swell backs, youngsters who would be welcome additions to any college roster, and Hagerty isn't signing their football death warrants by making reserves out of them, perish that thought. Rather, he intends to make them specialists—touchdown specialists. Their official title henceforth will be "climax men."

Jack Faber, while directing Maryland two years ago, employed the same tactics in handling Earl Widmyer and a couple of other human jackrabbits, and rather successfully, too. But Faber didn't have boys like Sheeran and Healy to carry out his strategy. This pair seems to be made to order for their roles. Both are fast, but Sheeran is small enough to hide behind an ant hill. Give him the ball and they'll have to call time out while the other side is looking for him.

Sheeran did quite well for himself last year, in the way of building up a reputation, by a series of off-tackle dashes that made him, eventually, one of the most feared backs on Georgetown's squad. Against Miami he reeled off a 30-yard run for a touchdown while most of the Floridians expected him to stumble and fall from the weight of the ball. Then he stepped off 40 yards against Richmond, being brought down from behind on the 9-yard line. Inexperience cost him a touchdown on that play.

He had two runs of 20 and 15 yards to his credit in the Maryland game, and then, playing opposite New York University, all but got away for a score. He ran 10 yards and was almost past Nate Machlowitz, safety man, which would have meant a touchdown. Nate, however, stuck out his big paw, clutched Master Sheeran by his shirt-tail and pulled him up. The boy was just hitting his stride when the season closed.

Healy, a sophomore, has yet to receive his baptism of fire, but Hagerty hasn't the least doubt he'll make good. The boy comes from St. Benedict's Prep, Newark, N. J., where he held the national 100 and 220 yard scholastic track records. Last spring he anchored (don't mistake the word. it merely means he was fourth man to run) Georgetown's freshman relay team, which won its event at the Penn relays. He has been doing well in practice and unles sthe omens are wrong, will see plenty of service this autumn.

At this writing, Tommy Keating, quarterback; Bob Ferrara and Urbanksi, halfbacks, seem to have first call on regular berths, with Bill Duff and Frank Meglen fighting like a couple of hungry men over a beefsteak. It is to early, of course, to mike any predictions, but the "pony" backs seem to be riding high, wide and handsome at the Hilltop.

Terps Wind Up Double Drill Sessions

With Bill Guckeyson, Waverly Wheeler and "Jumbo Jim" Meade back in harness after being in sick bay over the week-end, Maryland's football squad ploughed through two heavy sessions yesterday at College Park winding up with a brief scrimmage. All of these boys are backfield men—and good ones, too.

Today will find the Terps involved in the last of their two-a-day drills, for tomorrow registration will be in order and Thursday the boys will try bucking books again. But Head Coach Frank Dobson is satisfied with the progress made and will be willing to return to regular afternoon work.

Scrimmages are on the book for the rest of the week and the boys are playing for keeps, inasmuch as their coach has indicated that there will be a number of surprises when the personnel of the first team is announced. At the moment Guckeyson, Willis, Ellinger, Gormley, and one or two others of their stock are the only ones halfway certain of winning regular ports.

Columbian Loop to Get Gold Baseballs for Title

Members of championship teams in the Columbian Athletic League's Insect and Peewee divisions are notified that gold baseballs have been received for them and will be distributed shortly. President Joe Cohen also announced that the runner-up teams will receive individual emblems. The Buck Newsoms won the Peewee title. Gold baseballs for the Kennedy Service Station, Midget champs, will be received later.

8 Speedboats Entered in Race For President's Cup Next Week

A field of eight will answer the starting gun in the President's Cup Race, to be held on the Potomac September 26 and 27 as the feature of the President's Cup Regatta.

In a report on entries received to date, L. Gordon Leech, chairman of the race committee of the regatta, yesterday disclosed at a regatta committee luncheon that the speedboat classic probably will devolve into a hotly contested competition between three of the best Gold Cup craft in America, with numerous other contenders in a threatening position.

Herbert Mendelsohn's Notre Dame, winner of the President's Cup race last year, will defend its hard-earned laurels. George Reis' El Lagarto, perennial winner of the Gold Cup and President's Cup races, which did not race in Washington last year, probably will be the strongest challenger to face the Mendelsohn boat.

Impshi, Horace Dodge's sleek craft which captured the Gold Cup on Lake George this year, has been entered by Hubert Looker of Detroit. A driver for the Impshi has not yet been named, but it is doubtful if the boat will be piloted by Kay Don, the English speed king who rode it to victory on Lake George.

Jack Dunn, prominent speedboat enthusiast, has entered a reconditioned boat, the details of which he is keeping a deep secret. Dunn has not even given his mystery craft a name, but it is being carried on the entry lists by the regatta committee as the Jay Dee, a name Dunn uses for all his craft.

Miss Canada, the boat which couldn't quite make the starting line in this year's Gold Cup race, has been entered by Harold Wilson, of Ingersoll, Canada. Other entries in the President's Cup race are Scotty Too, owned by Sam Benford, Dover, N. H.; Hotsy Totsy, 3d, built and owned by Vic Kleisrath, South Bend, Ind., and Ma Ja, 2d, owned by J. K. L. M. Rutherford, of Long Island.

The supremacy of Melvin Crook's Betty, 5th, will be threatened in the American Speedboat Championship, another feature of the regatta, by Miss Saranac. Miss Saranac is owned by Edwin Guggenheim, of Rosslyn, Long Island. The Betty, 5th, has won the American speedboat championship for the two years it has been contested and easily captured the Red Bank Sweepstakes this year.

Howell Upsets Simmons in Net Play

Seeded forces lost one of their members in the fourth annual U. S. Government employes' men's singles tennis championships yesterday. Arthur Simmons, No. 7 seeded entrant, succumbed in straight sets to hard-hitting Spencer Howell, 6—3, 6—4, in a third round match.

Howell, in eliminating the representative of the Internal Revenue, joined a flock of seeded players in the fourth round. Accompanying him into that bracket were Ralph McElvenny, Edward O. Mather, Herb Shenkin, Alan Stauby and Morgan (Happy) Jacobs. Tony Latona, defending champion, reached the fourth round, Sunday.

Mary Ryan, defending champion in the women's tournament, carried the Department of Interior colors to victory with a 6—0, 6—1 win over Olivia Fountain, of Public Works Administration. Only one women's match is scheduled for today, with Sara Moore, top-seeded entrant, carrying the PWA standard against Clara Tabler, capable finalist of the 1935 tournament.

McElvenny advanced with a 6—1, 6—4 victory over Mariano Erana, of Veterans' Administration. Mather kept pace with the Security and Exchange lawyer by winning two matches in straight sets, defeating Austin Rice, 6—2, 6—1 and Stan Haney, 6—4, 6—2. The tall Texan, who last year gained the finals where he lost to Latona, appears to be hitting more effectively than in 1935.

Staubly, seeded No. 6, a District Building representative, trounced George Herbert, 6—4, 6—1, and Shenkin, seeded No. 5, disposed of Oscar Steinhauser, 6—2, 6—3. Jacobs, Federal Housing, and seeded No. 8, defeated Reuben Moore, of Veterans' Administration, 8—6, 6—1.

Girls' Net Teams In Semifinal Play

The last four teams in the annual Department of Playgrounds girls' doubles tennis championships will battle for entrance into the final round today at 2:30 p. m. at Chevy Chase Playground.

Ida Burns and Edith Lograde, of Potomac Avenue, will play Charlotte Metaja and Helen Ascosi, of Burroughs, while Mary Gray and Doris McCarty, of Twin Oaks, faces Valerie Loomis and Helen Miller, of Chevy Chase. The Mataja-Ascosi combination is lightly favored to gain the finals, but the other match appears to be a toss-up.

Miss Mataja is considered probably the best individual player of the eight survivors, having given the singles champion, Willie O'Steen, a hard battle earlier in the summer. The doubles title was captured last year by Helen Orme and Lucille McDowell of Burroughs, who did not defend their crown.

The finals will be played tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at Chevy Chase.

4 D. C. Golfers Win Amateur Matches

Rippy Is Carried to 21st Hole; Yoder, Burnett, Webb Also Score.

Brownell's debut in the blue-ribbon classic was anything but auspicious, as he met up with the blazing sticks of Ralph Strafaci, the Brooklyn hairdresser, who eliminated the blond protege of George Diffenbaugh, 6 and 4, with golf that would have beaten the best of 'em today.

The most amazed of the defeated Washingtonians was little Mr. Pittman, known as "Pitty-Pat," who rattled off an even par 37 and rolled up a 3 up lead on the first nine against 18-year-old John Langley, London schoolboy champion, and youngest member of the British Walker Cup team, only to fold up like Mr. Murphy's bed and lose, 3 and 2.

The defeat of Thompson, Pittman and Brownell reduced the Washington ranks to five survivors.

There happens to be a young chap named Roger Peacock, from Congressional, still in the battle. Peacock drew a first round bye today, and spent the morning and afternoon watching a couple of dozen matches.

Peacock gets into action tomorrow when he opposes Dr. William Tweddell, the British Walker Cup captain, at 9:50. Rippy meets Max Kaesche, of Ridgewood, N. J., at 10:55.

Yoder's second round opponent is Alan Smith, Asheville, N. C., boy, at 1 p. m. Webb takes on Ralph Strafaci, Brownell's conqueror, in what he hopes will be revenge, at 1:10; Burnett faces Don Armstrong, the Chicago whisky salesman, who lost to Lawson Little in the 1934 semifinals.

Rippy could have saved himself a lot of extra walking had he not been careless with his tee shots in the battle with Ward. Out of 38, standing 1 up, Rippy won two of the next five holes with even par golf, to stand on the fifteenth tee 3 up on his rival from the Far West.

With Pro Wiffy Cox following him, Yoder took Mitchell easily, turning in 39, to go 4 up, and winning three of the next four holes with even par golf to complete the route with a 2 over par performance for 14 holes.

Burnett Takes Match.

Burnett got the jump on Cannon, also turning in 39, and being 3 up at the thirteenth. The fireman dropped the sixteenth to a 4 when he missed his tee shot, but closed out his adversary with a half in 5 on the eighteenth.

It's a good thing Forrest Thompson wasn't hitting his irons better, otherwise Scotty Campbell would have been the victim of a startling upset. Thompson, out in 43, to Campbell's 42, held his more famous rival even at the turn. He dropped the eleventh by being trapped with his second; the twelfth by 3-putting, the fourteenth when he stymied, and the seventeenth, where the match ended.

Victim of a big upset today was Jack Munger, the bespectacled Texan, 1933 Amateur semifinalist, who lost to a mere municipal golfer, Don Socolli, of New Haven, one up. Munger dropped the first three holes, and fought desperately but to no avail to catch the straight shooting Connecticut golfer.

Charlie Yates, former Western and intercollegiate title holder, waited until near darkness to overcome Dick Jones, of New York, on the nineteenth hole, thereby averting a major catastrophe.

Freddie Haas, the New Orleans star who came here fresh from a victory in the Canadian Amateur, lost in an upset to Charlie Mayo, of New York, one up, although Mayo's friends insist the Gotham golfer is just as good as the best in the field. Mayo's four on the fourteenth told the story.

Tailor, Thomson Best.

Two British favorites were eliminated. Harry Bentley, of Southport, who holds the closed English championship, and who was the star of the recent Walker Cup matches, from His Majesty's standpoint, bowed to Walter Blevins, a Kansas Cityan, 1 up, after losing the last four holes.

Joe Lynch, of Boston, former Georgetown University star, last year's amateur semi-finalist, played well in defeating Paul Leslie, the New Orleans terror, 2 and 1, and Reynolds ("Extra Hole") Smith, the piano-legged Texan, won from Gordon Kummer, of Milwaukee, 4 and 3.

Sanctum Guards The Middies' New Football Plays

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 14.—A sanctum sanctorum has been erected on the Naval Academy football practice field, which a canvas wall already surrounds and to which admission is only by special ticzkets. Inside the inner circle the special offensive formations to be sprung on opponents for the first time are outlined.

A period of hard daily scrimmaging was started with the work against the plebes and squad B day. Today, the varsity worked ? Saturday. Today, the varsity worked in groups against squad B with a number of new men tried out in both backfield and line.

Frank Swiderski, weight thrower, and Lem Cooke, a fleet plebe of last year, were in the backfield, with Sneed Schmidt and Bill Mason. Al Wallace, a plebe tackle last year, was tried at center; Ben Jarvis, 220-pounder and the heaviest man on the squad, was at tackle, and Dick Gunderson and Alphonse Minvielle worked at the guards.

C. U. Gridmen To Battle for Jobs Today

A civil war that should make the one in Spain look like a well-cooked omelette by comparison will flare anew this afternoon at Catholic University when Coach "Dutch" Bergman sics his first team on the second-stringers and all-comers in the Cards' first dress rehearsal of the season.

It should be some assault-and-battery party, what with the rebels, or second-team men, rebelling against their present status in Brookland social circles, and the regulars determined to hold their position at all costs. Of course, it will not be as rough and tough as the old Catholic U.-Maryland scrimmages, those every-man-for-himself gatherings, but there will be moments this afternoon when some of the boys forget they are working on the body and person of a roommate or classmate.

Eyes on Carroll.

Berman is particularly anxious to see how "Irish" Carroll responds to the "go" signal, because his entire offensive is built around the curly-haired halfback who is being hailed as the new wonder of District football. The modified "T" formation Bergman has selected as his basic backfield formation, will be given its first trial, although there seems to be no reason why it shouldn't work. This manner of arraying the backs before their shift enables Bergman to make better and more frequent use of Carroll's talents.

In the ball-carrying department with Carroll will be "Spec" Foley, quarterback; Bill Adamatis, halfback, and Bob Makofske, fullback.

But there are others who will bear close watching today, notably Freddy Rogers, nee Rydzewski, who is filling George Mulligan's brogans at end; Leonine Leo Katalinas, assuming Ed Karpowich's tackle duties, and Dick Arnold, the musical guard, who has been selected to fill Bill Lajousky's position. The future security of these men depends largely on their performances today, because failure to live up to expectations will mean demotion to the second, yea, even third teams.

Anticipating the eager enthusiasm of the boys Trainer George Lentz has laid in a large supply of additional liniment, bandages, splints, crutches and stretchers. Business should be good at the old stand.

Accounts Wins Over Bankers In Play-Off

Reynolds Allows National Savings 7 Hits to Win Series Game, 3 to 1.

Treasury Accounts and Deposits filed away a 3-1 victory over National Savings & Trust Co. in its account books yesterday and deposited the champions of the Bankers League among the ranks of fallen teams in The Post Association's week-day play-offs.

The Treasury team proceeded to show that the 4-4 tie which marked their first meeting last week was all a big mistake. Thus, the champs of the Sports Center Government League qualified to play Public Works Administration tomorrow while National Savings will tackle Resettlement Greenbelts on the same day, both games marking the start of the second round.

Only one game is slated for today, a play-off of a tie between Potomac and Electric Power Co. of the National Capital League and Procurement Division of the Federal AA League. Action will start at 4 p. m. or as soon thereafter as possible, on the South Ellipse.

The pitching of Art Reynolds, who was very stingy with base hits, tied up the Bankers like a roll of bills. The one National Savings run came on an error in the sixth inning when Woody Godfrey singled and scored when Benny Burch drove a hard one to rightfield and Wade nessed up the play.

Yields Seven Hits.

None of the other six hits off Reynolds could be converted into scores and with Accounts and Deposits taking a 2-0 lead off Freddie Burrell in the first inning, the Reynolds pitching grew more bothersome as the game progressed.

The first run came when Hal Chilcott singled off Godfrey's glove at third, stole second and scored on Freddie Miller's drive to left center which Al Adrian misplayed. Adrian came right back shortly afterward to pave the way for the second run when Bus Freed singled to his territory and Miller scored from second as the outfielder again faltered on the play for another error.

Treasury made it 3-0 in the third, with Freed again figuring largely in the proceedings. The third sacker singled to right center, took second on Pickett's Texas leaguer over short, third on Seay's grounder to Godfrey and scored on Batton's single.

Crow's Flight Captures Narragansett Feature From Miss Nico

Stablemate Takes Show Position

Double Returns $82.30 to 206 Bettors; Prairie Dog Disqualified.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 14.—The Dixiana Stud, entry of Crow's Flight and Matas Brother, ran first and third in the 6 furlong allowance race for 2-year-olds which featured today's Narragansett card. Crow's Flight came intwo lengths ahead of Mrs. H. H. Brown's Miss Nico, which had a nose on Matas Brother.

The time was 1:12 3/5. Crow's Flight, carrying 112 pounds, stood that weight better than did the early pace-setter, the Liberty Lane Stable's Durwrack.

The latter led the field down the back stretch with Crow's Flight closest in pursuit and E. D. Shaffer's Evening Tide next.

Prairie Dog Disqualified.

Approaching the far turn, Matas Brother gained ground on the outside. After they turned for home, Miss Nico exhibited the best speed of all but was unable to catch Crow's Flight although she nosed out Mata's Brother for the show.

The Dixiana entry paid $3.50, $2.60 and $3.10. Miss Nico paid $6.60 and $5.30.

The 1st race resulted in the disqualification of E. D. Shaffer's Prairie Dog after the latter crossed the finish a length and a half in front of the Dixiana's Rafter. The former swerved sharply to the outer rail as they straightened for home and carried out Rafter.

The combination of Rafter and G. J. Rooney's Yenoor, winner of the second race, paid $82.30 in the Daily Double with 206 tickets sold on this combination.

PRAIRIE DOG displayed good speed, met early opposition from RAFTER, carried the latter out when he bolted at the stretch turn, was straightened out, drew clear, attempted to duck out again approaching the sixteenth ground and held away to the close. He was disqualified. RAFTER moved up stoutly nearing the far turn, fought it out courageously, recovered gamely after meeting interference and lasted to hold ZACA. ZACA was prominently placed the entire trip and held on willingly in the drive. GALA STAR was well up from the start and held on in gamer fashion than usual to the end. STRABO made up some ground though unable to reach the leaders. HIGH VELOCITY was outrun all the way and, though saving ground at the stretch turn, never could threaten.

YENOOR had speed from the start, withstood determined opposition during the first 6 furlongs from DESPERADO, disposed of him and drew out in the last furlong. KEEP OUT moved up stoutly on the outside down the backstretch, made a game bid to reach the winner, was not good enough though coming on willingly in the drive. BRILLWINN followed in closest chase of the leaders early and held on well to the end. DESPERADO had good speed, disputed the command with the winner, faltering in the last quarter mile. BULL MARKET, away slowly, moved up when reaching the backstretch, but was unable to enter into contention. PHARENOUGH never could reach the leaders.

GENERAL A., slow to begin and outpaced in the run down the backstretch, began moving up on the outside rounding the far turn, closed steadily in the stretch and, wearing down the leaders, was going away at the end. MEROVECH, steadied along back of the pace, held on willingly to the close. DARK WAR, quickest to begin, drew clear after going the first five-sixteenths though unable to keep pace when challenged by the first two inside the closing furlongs. LADY PAL was never able to reach the leaders. GENERAL PULASKI had good speed for the opening quarter mile and was unable to keep pace with the leaders thereafter.

SCOTCH SOLDIER, unruly at the post, moved up steadily when reaching the backstretch, fought it out stoutly with UNLAWFUL for the lead, drawing out in the last furlong. UNLAWFUL had good speed from the start, made a game effort to go along with the winner challenged, but was not good enough. FRUMPER, a trailer for the first 6 furlongs, closed willingly on the outside through the stretch. THIS WAY was unable to reach the leaders under pressure. PLATINUM BLONDE was outrun throughout. YAP had good early speed, weakening in the last 3 furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:06. Off at 6:07½. Winner, Mrs. L. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLANDISHMENT, $7.70, $5.00, $3.70; JUST REMEMBER, $8.70, $5.20; CLAIMANT, $3.40.

BLANDISHMENT went to the front at once, drew clear in the run to the first turn and, rated along in front under slight restraint, fought it out gamely and just lasted. JUST REMEMBER, outpaced early, went into contention with a rush leaving the backstretch and, closing gamely through the stretch, just failed to be along in time. CLAIMANT, reserved early, held on gamely in the drive though unable to endanger the first two. POPO moved through on the inside at the far turn and held on well though unable to make up any ground in the drive. THE TRIUMPH never could reach a prominent position.

P. Waner Ties Mark; Pirates Win Pair

Phils Bow, 11-4, 6-5, as 'Big Poison' Gets 200th Hit for 7th Season.

Philadelphia, Sept. 14 (AP).—Paul Waner tied a modern National League batting record today as the Piraies took both ends of a double-header from the Phillies, 11 to 4 in the first, and 6 to 5 after 10 innings in hte afterpiece.

The slugging right fielder of the Buccaneers swatted his 200th hit of the season in the first game—the seventh year that "Big Poison" has reached the two-century mark.

Ayres' Report Shows Steady Recovery Pace

Banker Says Three Quarters of Year Register Marked Gains.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 14.—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, in his monthly business review, said today, "The steadiness with which progress has been made this year is more important than the amount of the advance."

The vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co. declared, "This is the first year since the depression in which general business has improved for three consecutive quarters.

"The steady course of improvement of the second quarter over the first and third quarter above the second, has prevailed in all the major divisions of our economic life except one," he said.

"The single major exception is agriculture, and there the effects of the drought have been so very severe that many crops will have seriously small yields.

"Perhaps a further exception should be made with respect to our foreign trade, but the figures which would enable us to be sure about that are not yet available."

Col. Ayres said the political campaign "seems to be having no important effect, either favorable or adverse, on the course of business activity. The same thing has been true so far of the unsettled and threatening condition of affairs in Europe, he said.

The business statistician said that corporation earnings as a whole have increased this year in even greater degree than the volumes of business have expanded, and predicted "many irregular and unpredictable changes in dividend payments between now and the close of the year" as managements and boards of directors and bankers "reconcile their judgments as to the wise and prudent disposals to be made of corporate earnings."

Small Town Sales Gain in August

Daily average sales of general merchandise in small towns and rural areas for August were about 20 per cent higher in dollar volume than for August, 1935, and were 41 per cent above those for the same month of 1934, the Department of Commerce reported.

Sales for August increased about 9 per cent from July or less than the usual increase at this season of the year, the Department said, so that the seasonally adjusted index which stood at 114.5 for July receded to 112 for August.

Sales for the first eight months of the year were 13 per cent above those for the corresponding period of 1935 and were 38 per cent higher than for the same period of 1934.

Business Failures.

New York, Sept. 14.—Business failures reported by Dun & Bradstreet for the week ending September 3 advanced to 163 from 138 a week ago, and compare with 197 in the same period last year.

December sold off from 12.22 to 12.06 in late trading and closing prices showed net losses of 6 to 14 points for the market as a whole. The opening was 3 points lower to 2 points higher with the influence of steady Liverpool cables partially offset by hedge selling from the South.

Hudson Plant Sales Pass 100,000 Mark

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 14.—With factory shipments of 4,906 Hudson and Terraplane cars in August, total shipments of the Hudson Motor Car Co's 1936 models passed the 100,000 mark, according to W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales. Shipments of 101,704 of the 1936 cars as of September 1, compare with shipments of 74,056 of the 1935 models on the same date last year.

"Our retail sales," said Tracy, "continue to be unusually large despite the fact that the peak of the automobile selling season is past. Retail sales of Hudson and Terraplane cars in the United States for the month of August totaled 7,878 which was 25 per cent greater than in August, 1935. Sales to date are 34 per cent greater than last year."

Steel Production.

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 4.3 points to 72.5 per cent of capacity, compared with 68.2 last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations averaged 72.2 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 48.3 per cent.

Autos Expected To Lead Next Big Trade Rise

Production of 1937 Cars Will Be Under Way in October.

New York, Sept. 14.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Company says:

"The next major move in business is expected to receive its impetus from the automobile trade. Assemblies will, of course, be held at a minimum this month, but a renewed upswing will get under way in October. Several manufacturers are now in production of their 1937 models, and the entire industry will probably be turning out next year's cars within four weeks.

"The heavy industries are continuing to make impressive showings, and this group, on the average, is currently operating at the highest rate in over six years.

"For example, residential building contracts for the first three weeks of August were contra-seasonally higher than in July and were approximately 127 per cent above those for the corresponding 1935 period. As a result of the sharp reduction in new Federal projects, the non-residential and public works and utilities divisions made a much less favorable showing, which brought the year-to-year gain in all classifications to 46 per cent.

"The continued improvement in residential building is distinctly encouraging, as it is largely the result of basic forces and lacks the artificial stimulus of operations in the other two major divisions."

Curb Stocks Drop In Quiet Trading

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—Curb market stocks sought lower levels in quiet trading today. Losses of minor fractions to more than a point were in the majority among all active groups. A rally toward the end of the session lifted most issues up slightly from the lows of the day.

Those on the offside included Niagara Hudson Power at 15½, Northern States Power "A" 37¾, Pan American Airways 57¾, Wayne Pump 32¼, Aluminum Co. 133½ and American Gas 43¾.

Scattered gainers included Cord Corporation, Pioneer Gold, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and United Gas. Electric Bond & Share ended unchanged at 23¼ after dropping to 22⅝. Cities Service likewise was unchanged. Sales of 250,000 shares compared with 344,000 last Friday.

Stocks Retreat Slowly to Await Maine Election Results; Bonds Soft, Franc Weak.

New York, Sept. 14.—Financial markets idled away a fine autumn day, uninspired by economic developments and thinking mostly of the outcome of the Maine voting. Enough traders were willing to risk their money on the prospect of a good rally tomorrow, in case of a sweeping Republican victory, to hold prices from a bad slump; but the tone of the market was one of caution. Bonds also were inclined to soften and commodities were mixed. December wheat closed ⅛ of a cent higher at 112⅞ cents a bushel.

It has been clear for several days that the results of the Maine election would outweigh on short term scales other stock market influences. Consequently it was not surprising that the election was virtually the only matter discussed in Wall Street. Traders took only a mild interest in attempts to push forward or backward any stock. Both the immediate and the long-term influences on corporation earnings and on stock prices were kept in the background.

Good Trade News.

Prices were whittled a little here and there, which to some people may have indicated a lack of confidence in a Republican success in Maine, but the selling also lacked enthusiasm. On the business side the record indicated a good start for autumn trade, but no expansion yet has developed capable of stirring the speculative imagination. Accustomed for many months to seeing large increases over corresponding periods of the previous year, the markets show disappointment at any fall in the percentage of rise, regardless of the fact that the position now occupied is stronger.

In its weekly survey the Department of Commerce reports an upward trend in retail trade in nearly all sections of the country last week and "a resumption of wider margins over last year." Drought influence was felt in only a few spots. A more authoritative survey of the drought influence was supplied by President Bledsoe of the Santa Fe Railway. He found a sharp contraction in trade in small communities, but little or no effect as yet in the cities. In any event the full force of the crop damage scarcely would be felt severely until later.

Steel Industry Rebounds.

The most important of the week's indices was the estimate of steel activity made by the American Iron & Steel Institute. After dipping to 68.2 per cent of capacity last week, because of the holiday slack, the operating rate for the industry this week is set at 72.5 per cent. That equals the record for a six-day week since the depression, and is particularly encouraging inasmuch as the autumn is not usually the year's most active period for the steel industry.

A partial offset, for the steel companies, to the rebound in the operating rate was the renewed demand at some plants for higher wages and the efforts to unionize the plants. If, as steel executives maintain, higher wages are granted only on condition that prices are advanced, the result migh not be favorable for industry, unless demand shows unexpected expansion. Higher wages without corresponding increase in production or prices might not necessarily hurt industry in general, but they would cut into steel company earnings.

Abroad the outlook continued cloudy. The German dictator's further outline of his hopes for aggression in Russia and his boasting of military power are only insuring another race for armaments in Europe. That race will be run along a road that may lead to temporary business inflation, with greater demand for metals, cotton and other equipment; but at the end it certainly will weaken the ability of the world to climb up to former high levels of international trade. It also threatens the financial stability of the nations involved.

French Money Flees.

Nervousness in the London and other foreign markets increased. Sterling rose in spite of the heavy operations reported by the stabilization fund to support the franc. French currency was maintained at an unchanged rate against the dollar, but capital appeared to be leaving France, frightened at this time less by the prospect for devaluation and abandonment of gold as a financial or trade measure than by the growth of communistic demonstrations.

With the anti-Communists, or Fascists, on the one hand, fighting the Communists, but doing their utmost on their part to upset economic and social stability by planning for war, and with the Communists answering threat with threat, and being considered by the markets as a menace in themselves, the explanation for the comparative tranquillity on this side apparently was the old one, namely, that Europe to most Americans seems part of another world.

Boardroom Sweepings.

Some Wall Street critics think that if the markets must be regulated the control at least might be exercised by American talent. Plenty of good accountants and men who understand the workings of Wall Street are available for the jobs, but the SEC is said to have no disinclination to the employment of aliens. The head of one department is an alien, and he is one who is getting a good deal of publicity. Perhaps the SEC thinks that mere declaration of intention is sufficient evidence of citizenship. . . . Puts and calls indicate some bullishness on Nash, with puts priced at half a point down. Calls are said to be difficult to obtain. Chrysler is quoted 8 down and 5 up. General Motors is 2 down and 1½ up. Steel is 3 and 2½. Most leading stocks are quoted further away from the market for puts than for calls. . . . Wall Street brokers and customers' men have fewer tips on offer these days than was the case earlier in the summer. Tips are easy to scrape up once the market acts as though it could carry them. . . . Wright Aero has produced some whacking profits in only a few days for those on the right side. . . . It sometimes pays in a bull market to buy a stock with a scanty supply of shares on the list. . . . Bulls on the companies making motor trailers say that before long the demand will increase enormously from hitch hikers who figure that a passing motorist would just as soon hook on a trailer for a spell as to have the thumb wiggler ride with him.

R. V. Fleming Leaves Today For Convention

Bankers' Association Head to Lead Discussions of Problems.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, who is chief executive of the American Bankers' Association, leaves today for San Francisco to preside at the convention of the association there next week. Questions of banking policies and their relation to the public which the profession serves will be discussed at this, one of the most important meetings in the history of the organization. Leading bankers of the country will be in attendance.

R. V. FLEMING.

General and specific banking functions will be dealt with in the most interesting program which has been arranged. A large attendance is indicated by reports from the convention hotel and transportation committees.

Fleming will address the convention at the morning session of September 22. He will first review and outline activities of the association and its important committees. The second part of his address, it is understood, will have to do with certain economic factors and suggestions in connection with problems they present. At the conclusion of his term of office, Fleming will remain a member of the association's administrative committee for a term of three years. He will return to Washington October 15.

Employes' Conference.

Representatives of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. from the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, who have been with the company less than a year, are attending the educational conference which the company is holding for them this week at the Hamilton Hotel.

Their attendance at this conference is based upon the outstanding records they have made. Fred O. Lyter, a sales executive from the home office of the Connecticut Mutual, will be in charge of the school. Mr. Lyter has played a prominent part in many of the modern developments in the field of life insurance selling, and has been associated with the Connecticut Mutual for more than 15 years.

John Lister McElfresh, local general agent for the Connecticut Mutual, in commenting on the school, stated that with life insurance entering into the lives of 63,000,000 Americans, who have more than $10,000,000,000 of protection, the necessity of responsibility for life insurance companies having well-equipped representatives in the field is evident, and that this school by his company is in line with the great deal of time and effort which is being expended by life insurance companies in the proper education of agents to authoritatively advise the insuring public.

Cecil Ford, Ashley Ogden, Baltimore, Md.; Henry Rindzune, Harrisburg, Pa.; E. L. Bensen, jr., William B. Ferrell, J. D. Fauntleroy, jr., Gilbert Leigh, Richmond, Va.; John J. Murray, Peter P. Liwski, Washington, D. C.

Hopkins Honored.

National recognition for his personal production record last month has been won by J. G. Hopkins, Washington representative of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., according to word received here from the home office in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mr. Hopkins was named among the first 15 of his company's more than 1,500 sales representatives in number of applications written during August.

Banking Notes.

William S. Quinter, president of the District Building & Loan Association, who has been ill for several months, now is able to see his friends at his residence, 3930 Connecticut avenue.

Sidney T. Thomas and Marshall O. Exnicios, vice presidents of Robert C. Jones & Co., Inc., have returned from vacations at Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.

J. R. McMullan, an assistant vice president of Riggs National Bank, is back from a month's visit in North Carolina.

Frank M. Perley, trust investment officer, American Security & Trust Co., is on a European trip.

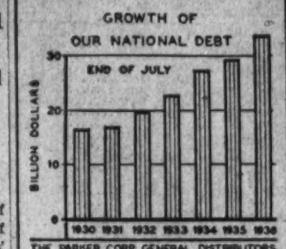
U. S. Dept Doubles In 6-Year Period



Boston, Mass., Sept. 14.—More than double in six years' time is the record growth of our national debt—and six years ago the debt was considered large. Prior to the World War the Federal debt ran less than $3,000,000,000.

The war jumped this up to $25,000,000,000 in 1919 from which time it was gradually reduced to $16,000,000,000 in 1930.

From 1930 and on the debt has grown by leaps and bounds. We are now paying yearly interest alone equal to our total national debt of 20 years ago.

Prices of Grains Sag at Chicago

More or less selling of wheat here against purchases at Winnipeg was reported. A bearish circumstance was word of increased seeding of wheat in domestic winter crop territory Southwest.

Trader License Law Effective On Exchanges

Professionals Now Licensed Under Provisions of Commodity Act.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Professional traders in exchanges throughout the Nation today came under Federal supervision as licensing provisions of the commodity exchange act went into effect.

Brokers were required to obtain licenses under the act. While Federal supervision is not new to the Board of Trade itself, this market having been affected by the 1922 grain futures act, individual brokers and the Mercantile Exchange were under direct Government influence regulation for the first time.

One ruling in connection with the new act to which objection was voiced by some traders was announced in Washington recently. The order, issued by the solicitor of the Department of Agriculture, held that commission merchants cannot deal in "trading privileges" to be executed in a foreign country and that futures trading in a foreign country was within terms of the act.

Trading in "privileges" on the Board of Trade and in "rights" on the Mercantile Exchange has been suspended to conform with the act. "Indemnities" or "privileges" are used largely to limit losses. These transactions are for the purchase and sale of "rights" to buy or sell a specified quantity of commodity futures at a specified price during the following business day.

Cotton Plants Are Operating Close to Peak

Statistics Show Production 12 Per Cent Above Season's Average.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 14.—The cotton manufacturing industry of this country is operating at close to the highest rate on record for this time of the year, according to statistics issued by the New York Cotton Exchange Service. With allowance for seasonal variation, cotton mill activity is currently on a basis of about 12 per cent above the average at this time of the year recorded in the pre-depression years of 1922-27 inclusive.

"We estimate that domestic mills consumed approximately 571,000 bales of all kinds of cotton during August," says the Exchange Service. "This compares with only 408,000 in the same month last year and 419,000 two years ago. The largest consumption in August was established in 1927, when the mills used 635,000 bales, and the next largest was in 1933, when they used 589,000. Average August consumption in the past five years was 449,000 bales.

"Last spring, when conditions in the cotton trade were rendered uncertain by the invalidation of the Agricultural Adjustment program of cotton production control and of the processing tax, demand for cotton goods was so limited that mills ran down their unfilled orders to a very low point and accumulated unsold stocks of goods, with the result that a movement was started to bring about concerted curtailment. Within a few weeks, however, a new buying movement in the cotton goods market started, as these uncertainties were eliminated, and as prices of cotton and cotton goods became adjusted to an ex-tax basis.

"The strength of the position of cotton mills has been reflected by the fact that prices of cotton goods have risen more than costs of the raw materials in recent months, thereby re-establishing more favorable manufacturing margins. Most divisions of the industry have become well sold ahead, and supplies of numerous important classes of goods have become so limited that distributors and consumers have had difficulty in obtaining desired deliveries."

On the Air Today

One of the more promising aspects of that present-day question of more than passing interest—"To swing or not to swing"—is the frequent inquiries addressed to this desk on the whereabouts of Ray Noble and information on his return to the air.

Promising, and gratifying, because Noble cannot be termed a swing maestro by any yardstick known to pop music fans. Noble hews to the line of harmony and melody. Whatever concessions he makes to advocates of "hot music" he respects melody if nothing else.

Now comes word that the English director has returned to these shores from his home in Sussex and is in rehearsal with his American musicians. He returns soon to the rainbow room in Radio City. It is definitely understood he will be playing soon over N. B. C. nets from that point.

Incidentally, he is reported as having completed two new tunes while vacationing. They are to be published and released in the next few weeks.

Rumor has it also that Noble is being considered for a program to start about the first of the year and to run one solid year.

So long as followers of dance music continue to go for Ray Noble and his orchestra in a big way, we seem safe from going any more overboard than we already have for "swing" and its accompanying clatter and musical headaches. Latest to join the ranks of directors diametrically opposed to swing is Peter Van Steeden, maestro of "Town Hall Tonight."

Van Steeden says dancers do not prefer swing. Definitely do not. And he backs his statement with statistics gathered by three of his orchestra units now traveling the country. Note this cheering observation:

"I asked the leaders for data just out of curiosity. From their answers I suspect that swing is on its way out—and hastily. So far, the boys have played in 33 States. They talked with the dancers. In 17 places in the East, the patrons called for orchestral offerings that retain simplicity of melody and harmonic structure. In five appearances in the South, there was only one request for 'hot licks' and one for 'sweet swing.'"

Van Steeden adds that requests for straight swing tunes as compared with simple and sweet songs ran 5 out of 12 in the West, however. He believes the fad is just taking hold in the West, whereas it is wearing on the nerves of the East.

After missing the premiere of his own show last week, Fred Astaire takes over the starring role in the second of the series tonight, WRC, at 8:30. Eddie Moran, the original Moran of the blackface team, Moran and Mack, is to be presented in his role as the world's champion "garble talker;" Frank Sullivan has written a skit for Astaire, entitled "The Captain's Dinner on the Brooklyn Ferry," and Charles Butterworth adds the comedy background. The versatile Astaire also contributes an impersonation of tap-dancing Bill Robinson and sings "The Way You Look Tonight" and "Pick Yourself Up." That Robinson impersonation is the "Bojangles of Harlem" number from "Swing Time." Late addition to talent roster: Abbey Players, Irish dramatic troupe, in a one-act farce.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Culbertson on Bridge

Expert Conceit.

It has been said that bridge experts are among the most conceited people on earth, and as long as I am permitted to make an exception of myself, my wife, and one or two of my closest associates I am more than willing to subscribe to this sentiment. Countless anecdotes have been told to illustrate and testify to the above thesis, whereas I have yet to hear one in which an expert filled the role of a modest violet. But a far better illustration than any anecdote is the fact that many experts categorically refuse to avail themselves of proved bidding devices. The inference is all too clear that their conceit drives them to accept improper contracts arrived at "under their own power," so to speak, rather than proper contracts reached through the medium of a convention not invented by themselves. It must not be thought that they object to conventions generally. The real point is that they cannot bear to admit that their own transcendent bidding is not as effective. Today's hand is a case in point.

North, dealer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

Obviously, there was nothing to the play. The king of trumps dropping, the hand was laid down for seven, and then the following dialogue took place.

North (bitterly): "Well, I suppose you're satisfied! Maybe I can have my way from now on about using asking bids. I'll admit we shouldn't have reached seven, but six certainly was a cinch."

South (defensively blustering): "O, yeah? Well, suppose you tell me just how we would get there with asking bids."

North: "As I said before, a cinch. The first two bids would have been the same, but, after your one spade response, I could have found out about slam possibilities without jeopardizing the game. All I had to do was bid four clubs. With second round club control and the ace of diamonds you would have answered with four diamonds. Now it would be just a question of locating losing hearts, and I could have found this out with a bid of four hearts. Also, kindly notice I still am within the four spade-range. If you had no heart control you'd have to sign off in four spades, but since you had second round control you'd answer four no trump. Then, with the assurance that there were no losing tricks in any side suit, I could bid six spades and be certain of an excellent chance to make it, even if you had only five spades to the ten spot."

South: "Well, I'll admit that this hand would have worked well with asking bids, but I don't see why we couldn't get there without them. Why didn't you bid three clubs as an artificial forcing bid over my one spade."

North: "I considered that, but I could see it wouldn't do me any good. Suppose I had bid three clubs. No matter what your response might be, I would have to bid four spades over it. Suppose you'd had such a hand as the king-jack-ten five times in spades, the king-queen-jack of diamonds, the king-jack-ten of clubs, with two little hearts. Do you mean to say that any power on earth would have stopped you bidding for a slam? And with that hand we couldn't even have had a play for it, since we'd be off the diamond ace and a heart."

South: "Well, I considered bidding again over your four-spade bid. The only thing was, my spade suit was so punk and I didn't know that the singleton of your bid was going to be valuable."

North: "That's just it! The way wewe had to bid it, neither of us knew!

Auto Accident 'Trivial,' Young Ickes Declares

Winchester, Mass., Sept. 14 (AP).—Robert H. Ickes, 21, foster son of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, whose automobile collided with another car in Boston Saturday night, said today the accident was "so trivial that two policemen attached no significance to it."

He said the officers, who appeared on the scene directly after the accident, observed a slight bump on the rear fender of the other car and took no report of it.

Twenty hours later the driver of the other car, John F. Kering, 21, of Boston, reported, James Daley, Boston police captain said, that four persons in his car suffered shock.

Woman Wrote 'Threats' To Herself, Expert Says

Akron, Ohio, Sept. 14 (AP).—Prosecutor Herman E. Werner announced today that J. F. Barnhart, handwriting expert, reported Mrs. Madelyn Messner, 25, was the writer of threatening letters addressed to her and to city and county officials.

Warner said he would order the arrest of the woman, wife of a 74-year-old evangelist.

Mrs. Messner, her face seared with acid, told police a woman threw the fluid into her face Friday night when she answered a door-belling ring. Barnhart studied specimens of Mrs. Messner's handwriting and the anonymous letters, Werner said, and announced his conclusion that the woman penned them all—attempting in some instances to conceal her writing.
